HOPE ABANDONED FOR TRAPPED MEN

JAPAN REJECTS ALLIANCE WITH NORTHERN LORD

REFUSES PROPOSAL FOR WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS TO MUKDEN

Japs Will Protect Countrymen In Manchuria.

LONDON, May 22.—Chang Tso-Lin the Northern Chinese war lord, has unofficially approached the Japanese government with a proposal in which he intimated he would withdraw his troops to Mukden, the capital of Manchuria, if the Japanese would hold back his Nationalist foes in the drive toward Peking, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Tokio stated today.

The Japanese government refused to accept Chang's proposal, the dispatch added. The Japanese, it is reported, fear that a disorganized retreat of the Northern armies in Manchuria might result in a repetition of the Tsinan incident.

There are many Japanese in Manchuria and Japan is determined to see that none of its citizens are endangered. It is reported that all available Japanese troops in Manchuria are being concentrated at Mukden.

If fighting between the Nationalists and northerners spreads northward to Manchuria, Japanese troops are ready to take strenuous measures to prevent looting. Troops will be dispatched to strategic points at the first outburst.

Meanwhile, according to reports from Peking emanating from Chang Tso-Lin's headquarters, there are indications that the southern drive upon Peking may be checked. Chang announced that his troops had recaptured Tingchow and had repulsed a Nationalist attack upon Hokien.

ALAN DALE, FAME PLAY CRITIC, DIES

LONDON, May 22—His many friends here today mourned the death of Alan Dale, dramatic critic of the New York American and Universal Service, who was fatally stricken last night on a train between Plymouth and Birmingham.

Dale was on his way to visit his birthplace in Birmingham. He was sixty-seven years old. He sailed from New York ten days ago to make his annual review of the European stage for readers of the Hearst papers, with which he had been associated almost continuously for thirty-three years.

Dale was the oldest dramatic critic in New York in point of continuous service. He also wrote books, plays and many magazine articles.

POMERENE BEFORE PROBERS' SCRUTINY

WASHINGTON, May 22—Former Senator Atlee Pomerene, Ohio Democrats' favorite son candidate for the presidential nomination, was to come before the senate presidential campaign funds committee today as hearings were reopened here.

In addition to Pomerene the committee today was to examine Oscar Foellinger, Hoover manager in Indiana; Carmi Thompson, manager for the late Senator Willis of Ohio, and Clarence Buck, national manager for Lowden.

ATTEMPT TO BREAK DUKE WILL FAILURE

SOMERVILLE, N. J., May 22—Elizabeth Duke, Texas telephone girl, and 107 other reputed "poor relations," today were losers in their fight for a share of the $2,000,000 estate left by James B. Duke, tobacco magnate.

Judge John A. Frech, in Somerset County orphans court, held that the executors of the Duke will were within their rights when they divided the $2,000,000 among 167 persons of whose claims to kinship with Duke they were satisfied.

ILLNESS OF MRS. KNAPP HALTS TRIAL

COURTROOM Albany, N. Y., May 22. — Collapsing from the strain which she has been under for the last month, former Secretary of State Florence E. S. Knapp, today was ordered to bed by physicians and a recess was taken in her second trial until tomorrow.

Mrs. Knapp is on trial a second time before Supreme Court Justice Callaghan on a charge of stealing census money.

CONGRESSWOMAN IN FAVOR OF PUTTING DRY MEN IN UNIFORM

WASHINGTON, May 22—A member of the house "feminine bloc"—Mrs. Florence Kahn, Republican congresswoman from California—today declared in afvor of placing prohibition enforcement agents in uniform.

"The average, law-abiding person should have an even chance to escape being shot down by a prohibition agent who calls halt on a country road at night and then fires away,'" said Mrs. Kahn.

"The recent shooting of Jacob Hanson, an official of the Elks lodge, near Niagara Falls, N. Y., shows that every one who drives the country roads at night is in danger.

"Congress itself contributed a victim to this promiscuous shooting of dry agents when Senator Greene of Vermont was seriously wounded in Washington.

"The natural tendency of a motorist who is told to halt at night is to 'step on the gas.' If the prohibition agents were in uniform and displayed it, there would be fewer tragic results of the attempted enforcement of the law."

MAY BUY PLANE

BERLIN, May 22.—Officials of the Junkers works today confirmed reports that Baron Von Huenefeld, one of the members of the Bremen's crew, is negotiating with Prof. Junkers at New York for the purchase of the plane Europa. The baron said he and his two companions—Capt. Herman Koehl and Major James Fitzmaurice wanted to fly back to Europe in the Europa, which is now in Germany.

HOUSE DISCUSSING PROPOSED DAM BILL FOR BOULDER CANYON

Leaders Anticipate Passage Within Three Days.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Heeding the recommendation of President Coolidge and fearful of a new flood disaster being laid at its door, the house today took up the Swing Johnson bill for the building of Boulder Canyon Dam on the Colorado River.

With the threat of filibustering tactics met by the firm decision of leaders to bring the bill to a vote, all indications pointed to the passage within three days.

In an effort to relieve the federal government of the cost of flood protection, sponsors of the bill evolved the scheme of building a 550 foot dam on the river between Nevada and Arizona, generating electricity, and selling water both for irrigation purposes and for domestic use in Southern California cities.

This scheme would make possible the repayment of the $125,000,000 cost of the project to the federal government within twenty years, backers of the measure claimed.

The only stumbling blocks in path of the measure appeared to be the opposition of power interests to a government dam on the Colorado, where power sites are already being eagerly sought, and the refusal of Arizona to join with six other states in a compact for the project.

ARMY PLANES NOW RETURNING HOME

EASTPORT, Me., May 22—Two United States army Amphibian airplanes, which went to the rescue of the trans-Atlantic plane Bremen and which were forced down by a fog at Deer Island, New Brunswick, took off today enroute home to Washington. They circled over Eastport as they started down the New England coast.

One plane was manned by Major General James E. Fechet, commander of the two plane expedition which went north in the hope of releasing the Bremen from her ice-bound prison near Greenely Island, Labrador.

The other plane was in command of Ira Eakeg, who soared 2,000 feet above the Bremen to allow Fred Melchior, the Junkers mechanic, to drop down in a parachute to the ice field.

RECKLESS DRIVER SENT TO MANSFIELD

TOLEDO, O., May 22.—Abe Shapiro, Toledo youth, was today to begin serving an indeterminate term in the Ohio Reformatory at Mansfield, to which he was sentenced yesterday by Judge Fred Hay, of Defiance. The sentence was the result of the death of 13-year-old Bernard Schmidt who was killed by an automobile alleged to have been driven by Shapiro on March 10 last. Shapiro had been indicted for manslaughter but had pleaded not guilty. Yesterday, however, he admitted his guilt.

In pronouncing sentence, the court pointed out that the child, with his mother was prodeeding on the sidewalk, that the child was lost to the mother, that "human life cannot be restored", and that a prison sentence would "have its effect on other reckless drivers."

PAIR SENTENCED TO LONG TERMS AFTER JAIL BREAK FOILED

Taken Separately To Pen After Each Threatens Other.

BUCYRUS, O., May 22.—Sentenced to fifteen to twenty-five years each in the Ohio State Penitentiary, Alvin Worley, 35, of New Philadelphia, and John Longatre, 36, alleged escaped convict from the state penal institution and also of New Philadelphia, were to be taken to the penitentiary at Columbus today in separate automobiles following death threats that they hurled at each other when they were sentenced yesterday.

The two men, it was brought out in their jury trial, tried to effect their escape from the county jail here yesterday. A hole had been partially tunneled through the wall of the jail. It was discovered when Sheriff Elmer was taking Worley to the courtroom. Worley accused Longatre of being the leader in the attempted jail delivery and Longatre accused Worley of the same thing.

Authorities found two razors, a heavy sash weight from one of the prison windows, a coil of heavy wire and a sharp piece of steel in the bathroom adjoining the men's cell.

The attempted jail break, it was said, was responsible for the heavy sentences imposed upon the men. Longatre admitted at the trial that he had served a term in the Ohio Penitentiary for robbery.

Worley and Longatre are alleged to have held up and robbed a restaurant at Cresline and then kidnaped a taxi driver, slugging him, and using his cab to make their escape. They were captured a short time after the robbery, however.

BOY SCOUTS HELP SEARCH FOR GIRL

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 22.—Still without a plausible clue, police and county authorities, assisted by students and Boy Scouts, today continued their search for Beatrice Rosenbaum, 10-year-old girl who disappeared from her home here May 14.

Practically dropping a kidnaping theory, officers were directing a hunt by zones throughout the city, working on the belief that the girl, who is said to be mentally subnormal, had wandered away by herself, perhaps falling into a stream or some excavation.

Draining of a south side park lake, first move of its kind in the search, was expected to be completed this morning.

David Thomas, former city detective, started to work on the case today, his offer of assistance having been accepted by the Rosenbaum family.

SUES AUTO RACER FOR HEART BALM

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 22.—Charging that Ray Keech, of Pleasantville, N. J., who recently set a new world's speed record for automobiles at Daytona Beach, Fla., told her he was single when in reality he is married, Isabella Olivello had a $150,000 breach of promise suit on file in circuit court here today.

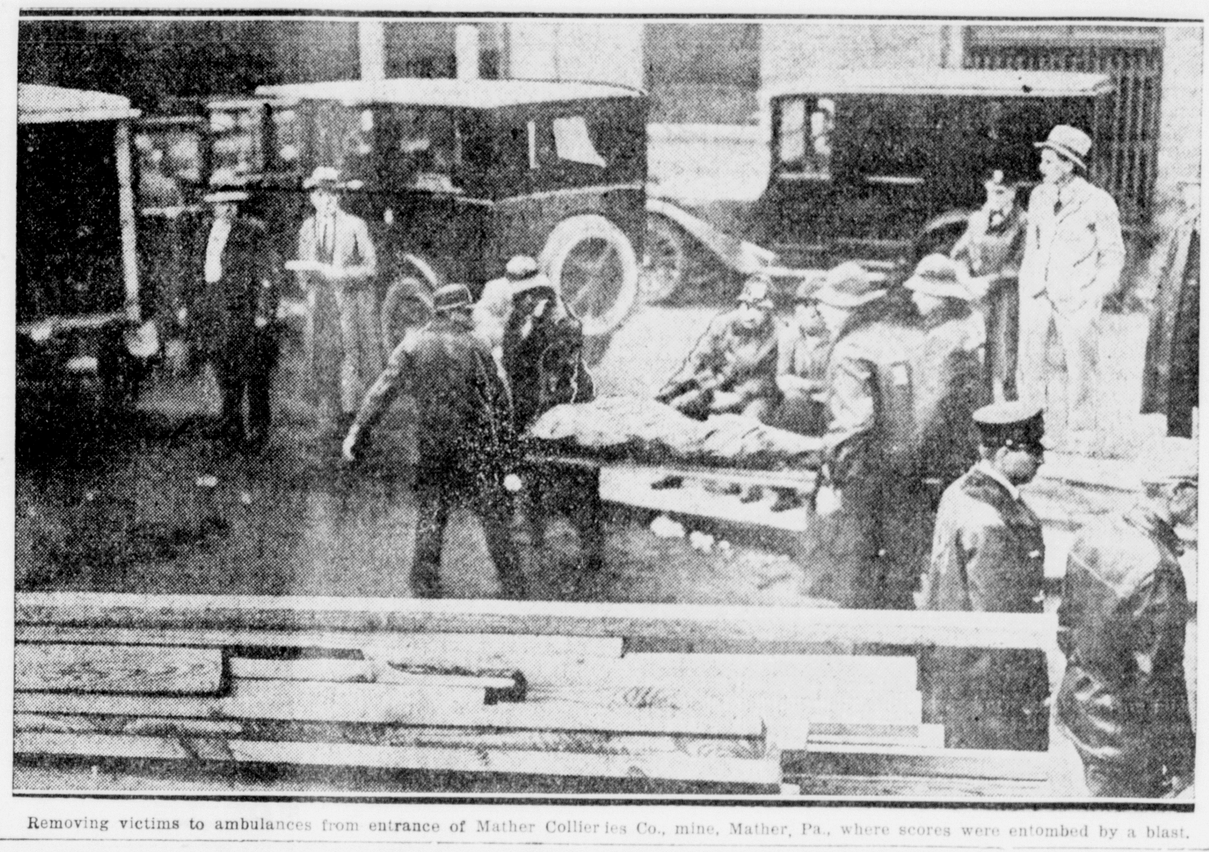

She says she met Keech four years ago and became infatuated with him. The auto driver agreed to marry her she says, and further alleges that he is the father of her child, born July 25, 1925. Keech denies the charges and is held in $5,000 bail for his appearance at the October term of circuit court.

GIVEN DIVORCE

PARIS, May 22.—A decree of divorce was granted today to Mrs. J. H. Stokes, wife of Dr. John Hinchman Stokes on the ground of desertion.

The couple was married in Cleveland on Feb. 25, 1908. Mrs. Stokes is the former Ella Bixler.

TAX REDUCING BILL NOW IN CONFERENCE AIDS CORPORATIONS

Amusement Tax Also Cut; Believe Passage Soon

WASHINGTON, May 22—The new tax reduction bill, which the senate held within the treasury limit of $204,000,000 after the house authorized a $289,000,000 slash, was sent to conference today while administration leaders revived hopes of adjourning congress next Saturday night.

The Boulder Dam bill, likely to pass the house in a day or two, but facing a desperate filibuster in the senate, and a final settlement of the tax differences between the two branches, alone stood between congress and adjournment at the end of the week. Failing to get congress homeward bound by May 26, administration leaders will set May 29 as the date for ending the present session.

The new tax reduction bill, as it passed both house and senate, carried no reduction in the normal income taxes but granted heavy relief to corporations. The general public was benefited by increased exemptions on amusement taxes, lightening of the club dues tax and repeal of the automobile tax. An effort to repeal and another to reduce the federal inheritance tax was defeated.

A number of efforts to attach farm relief and tariff legislation to the bill as "riders" were rejected by the senate.

THIRD GUNMAN SLAIN IN CITY

NEW YORK, May 22.—Louis Fabrizie, 25-year-old East Side gangster, known to police as "Louis the Wop," was shot and killed early today as he bent over a punctured tire of his automobile. He was gangland's third victim here within the last two days.

The victim's brother, Andrew, said he saw one of two men shoot Louis from a doorway. They escaped.

Police said Fabrizie was a sort of "commission man" for big gangs and did their "dirty work."

Eight men, including the brother of the victim, were held for questioning following the mystery murder.

NATIONALISTS PREPARE TO WAR ON SOCIALISTS IN REICHSTAG

BERLIN, May 22.—Embittered by their rout in the general election, leaders of the Nationalists today began making preparations to wage war against the Socialists when the new cabinet and the new reichstag come into power next month.

Count Westarp and his fellow leaders of the radical faction of the Nationalists predict that the next cabinet will not last long and that the new reichstag will encounter continued obstacles.

While the communists gained seats in the reichstag, there is little likelihood of any communist being taken into the government. Predictions are being made that the "grand coalition" will consist of Socialists, Democrats, Catholic Center party, Bavarian Peoples' party and the German Peoples' party.

Leaders of the victorious Socialist party declared they would work for European peace and harmony.

Premier Braun, of Prussia, was being hailed throughout Germany today as the most logical man to succeed Dr. Wilhelm Marx as chancellor.

STILL 250 IN HOSPITALS AFTER EXPLOSION OF PHOSGENE GAS

HAMBURG, GERMANY, May 22—Comparative tranquillity had settled down over Hamburg today after the involuntary poison gas attack which gave a taste of possible future warfare when fleets of military planes may spread deadly gas waves over enemy cities.

There are 250 persons in hospitals in addition to the eleven who were killed by the explosion of a phosgene gas tank. The death list may eventually reach nearly a score as some of the victims are in a perilous condition.

The gas scourge, which drove thousands from their homes, spread from the Stolzenberg Chemical Works on the outskirts of the suburb of Vedel, until dissipated by ammonia sprays and a rain storm. If it had taken place in the city proper it might have caused hundreds of deaths.

The scene was a replica of wartime with soldiers, firemen and police, their faces grotesque in gas masks, waging warfare against the deathly fumes all over the city, while the population fled in mad panic. Cattle dropped in the fields, trees and shrubbery withered before the yellow death wave.

It is reported that the League of Nations may send a representative here to investigate if the phosgene gas was being manufactured in violation of treaty regulations.

INDICT BANDIT FOR TOLEDO ROBBERY

TOLEDO, O., May 22. —George McDonald, 29, alias Westaway, whose daring attempt to hold up the Ohio Savings Bank and Trust Co., was frustrated by a neatly tossed brick thrown from the hand of a spectator, was under indictment for robbery here today in connection with the attempted holdup. The grand jury, to which McDonald was bound over last Wednesday by Judge Homer Ramey, returned the indictment against the would-be bandit late yesterday.

McDonald had obtained $3,000 loot when he pushed a note threatening the cashier's life through the cage window and had dashed into the street, attempting to commandeer an automobile to aid his getaway when a witness to the holdup hurled a brick, rendering the holdup man unconscious. The money was recovered.

FIGHT COMMUNISM

BOGOTA, Colombia, May 22.—The government is launching drastic restrictive measures to curb the spread of Bolshevism in this country.

POST REWARD FOR ALLEGED FIREBUG

BUCYRUS, O., May 22.—The Crawford County Farmer Mutual Insurance Company which has paid the property loss on the six barn fires in this vicinity recently, today posted a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons that fired two of the barns when a combined property loss of about $15,000 resulted.

Dale Lutz, 38, prominent farmer here, is already under arrest charged with the burning of two of the barns. He is being held in jail here in lieu of $10,000 bond, fixed when he pleaded guilty to the firing of two of the barns.

OHIO KNIGHTS NAME SAME OFFICERS AND ACCEPT TOLEDO BID

Columbus Priest To Succeed Bishop As Chaplain

MARION, O., May 22. — With election of officers completed and the choosing of Toledo as the site for the 1929 convention, the annual state convention of Ohio Council, Knights of Columbus, stood adjourned today. Toledo won the convention from Akron and Mansfield, chief contenders for the honor. A grand ball here last night signalized the closing of the 1928 sessions.

Election results were as follows: William E. Haas, Delaware, state deputy; Edward T. Gorman, Cincinnati, state secretary; Edward T. McCue, Middletown, treasurer; E. P. Fitzgerald, East Liverpool, warden; and Grattan Dugan, Wellsville, advocate. Each of these officers was re-elected.

Rev. Thomas A. Nolan, Columbus, was elected state chaplain, succeeding Bishop T. C. O'Reilly, of Scranton, Pa.

State delegates who will attend the supreme council convention in Cleveland in August were named as follows:

SIGNPOSTS FOR PLANES USED

PARIS, May 22.—Illuminated signposts for "aerial streets" are now in operation throughout France for night flyers. They are electrically lighted glass tubes built in the shape of dots and dashes, arranged in the Morse code spelling of the names of towns along the four commercial airplane routes—Paris-London; Paris-Brussels; Paris-Marseilles and Toulouse-Perpignan.

The Morse telegraphic code was employed to save space and insure visibility, as many of the towns have long names and must be further identified by adding the name of the province in which they are located. Although installed primarily to guide passenger and mail traffic, the signs will be lighted up for any flyer on twenty-four hours notice. The use of the signs requires a night flying airman to learn the Morse code.

Aviators are being trained also in night flying by a Parisian school which utilizes a set of indicators prefected by Henry Farman. With these instruments, it is said, a plane can be kept on its course despite fog and darkness.

CAN'T BLUFF HIM

OSSINING, N. Y., May 22. — Robert G. Elliott, state executioner who miraculously escaped with his life when his home was destroyed by two bombs, today had notified Sing Sing prison authorities that he would officiate at the next execution, scheduled for June 21.

RESCUE CREWS TURN ATTENTION TO TASK OF REMOVING DEAD

One Rescued As Gas Threatened Joked With Crew

MATHER, Pa., May 22. — Convinced that no life remains today among the victims of the Mather Colliery explosion still in the mine, rescue crews began the task of locating and removing the bodies of the last of the 197 victims.

One man, Frank Krubick, 55, was found alive in the depths of the mine today — miraculously saved from death when gas fumes and fire swept by his niche in the coal and rock.

Fourteen others escaped shortly after the explosion Saturday, but one was so badly hurt that he died yesterday. Officials feel certain these are the only survivors.

The slow, gruesome task of digging out the bodies buried within the mine has begun. It will take days—maybe a week or more—before they are all recovered.

Sixty-nine bodies had been removed today—fifty-eight identified, and eleven burned and mangled beyond recognition.

Rescue crews, who checked a fire which swept through butt 22, found Frank Krubick deep in the room, seated on a rail. Gas was seeping into the room, and he would have been overcome soon.

"You no come pretty soon," he greeted them, "somebody choke you."

The gas apparently had been sweeping down the entryway, and C. M. Lengel, directing the rescue work, said that he feared the 136 others known to be in the mine already have been overcome.

Krubick walked to the entry-way without assistance, was placed on a stretcher and brought to the surface. Here an attendant touched his lips with coffee.

"Give me all that coffee," Krubick shouted.

"I no have anything eat for three days."

The rescued man was taken to his home near the mine, where physicians took him under their care, and barred the doors.

News of Krubick's rescue spread like wildfire through the little mining village and hope, which had flickered and died late last night when fire was reported sweeping the workings, was revived as hundreds of men, women and children crowded the hillsides leading down to the mine tipple.

Lengel's statement that he feared the 134 others were dead failed to dim their optimism.

Children ran screaming down the roads, and from every miner's hut poured hurrying figures.

Hope has come back to Mather!

Sixty dead have been removed from the wrecked mine, fourteen rescued men are being cared for.

Bruce Deal, the first of the rescue crew to reach Krubick, said the miner leaped to his feet and threw his arms around Deal.

Despite his threats to "choke somebody," the miner, who is about 55 and unmarried, was in good spirits.

Krubick said that a companion, with whom he had been trapped in the room, wandered away and disappeared down the entryway. Rescue teams said the man probably was overcome by gas.

Fire which gained headway last night, was brought under control in the mine today, and the danger of a second explosion passed. Crews pressed forward, in the hope that others may have found pockets of air sufficient to sustain them since Saturday.

MATHER, Pa., May 22.—Community funeral services were to be held in this little mining village today for the sixty victims of the Mather Colliery explosion whose bodies have been recovered from the blast-wrecked mine.

The services were to be held in the village square, with a chorus of voices, and both Catholic and Protestant ceremonials.

Catholic services were to be held first with a visiting priest in charge, while in the afternoon Rev. C. G. Aldrich, pastor of the Christian Church, the only church here, was to preside. Twenty other ministers from nearby villages were to visit the homes of the bereaved.

CRASH KILLS MAIL PILOT

RICHMOND, Va., May 22.— Edward J. (Pat) Morrisey, 33, air mail pilot operating between here and New York, was killed early today when his plane went into a nose dive and crashed near the city airport. He had just taken off for New York and was believed to have lost his bearings in a fog.

He was buried under the wreckage, and the body was mangled. His home is in Idaho.

The Pitcairn Aviation Company of Philadelphia operates the mail service.

PERPETRATOR OF HOAX IS BEFORE MEDICS

LONDON, May 22.—One of the most sensational hoaxes in recent years was recalled today when Dr. Dorothy Logan, otherwise known as Mona McLellan, appeared before the General Medical Board for a discussion of her confession that she falsely claimed to have swum the English Channel. The case created a tremendous sensation last year.

Dr. Logan who was as well known as a swimmer as she was as a physician, announced her intention of swimming the channel from Cape Gris Nez, on the French coast, to England.

She apparently set out from the French coast and some hours later appeared on the English coast, claiming to have made the swim. Her claim was supported by several persons who said they accompanied her by boat.

For a few days Dr. Logan was lionized when doubts began to arise. Her claim was questioned and Dr. Logan confessed. She was summoned to court and fined $500, her defense being that she did not commit the hoax to gain financially but to draw attention to the necessity of rigid control over attempts to establish new athletic records.

TAX REDUCING BILL NOW IN CONFERENCE AIDS CORPORATIONS

Amusement Tax Also Cut; Believe Passage Soon

WASHINGTON, May 22—The new tax reduction bill, which the senate held within the treasury limit of $204,000,000 after the house authorized a $289,000,000 slash, was sent to conference today while administration leaders revived hopes of adjourning congress next Saturday night.

The Boulder Dam bill, likely to pass the house in a day or two, but facing a desperate filibuster in the senate, and a final settlement of the tax differences between the two branches, alone stood between congress and adjournment at the end of the week. Failing to get congress homeward bound by May 26, administration leaders will set May 29 as the date for ending the present session.

The new tax reduction bill, as it passed both house and senate, carried no reduction in the normal income taxes but granted heavy relief to corporations. The general public was benefited by increased exemptions on amusement taxes, lightening of the club dues tax and repeal of the automobile tax. An effort to repeal and another to reduce the federal inheritance tax was defeated.

A number of efforts to attach farm relief and tariff legislation to the bill as "riders" were rejected by the senate.

THIRD GUNMAN SLAIN IN CITY

NEW YORK, May 22.—Louis Fabrizie, 25-year-old East Side gangster, known to police as "Louis the Wop," was shot and killed early today as he bent over a punctured tire of his automobile. He was gangland's third victim here within the last two days.

The victim's brother, Andrew, said he saw one of two men shoot Louis from a doorway. They escaped.

Police said Fabrizie was a sort of "commission man" for big gangs and did their "dirty work."

Eight men, including the brother of the victim, were held for questioning following the mystery murder.

NATIONALISTS PREPARE TO WAR ON SOCIALISTS IN REICHSTAG

BERLIN, May 22.—Embittered by their rout in the general election, leaders of the Nationalists today began making preparations to wage war against the Socialists when the new cabinet and the new reichstag come into power next month.

Count Westarp and his fellow leaders of the radical faction of the Nationalists predict that the next cabinet will not last long and that the new reichstag will encounter continued obstacles.

While the communists gained seats in the reichstag, there is little likelihood of any communist being taken into the government. Predictions are being made that the "grand coalition" will consist of Socialists, Democrats, Catholic Center party, Bavarian Peoples' party and the German Peoples' party.

Leaders of the victorious Socialist party declared they would work for European peace and harmony.

Premier Braun, of Prussia, was being hailed throughout Germany today as the most logical man to succeed Dr. Wilhelm Marx as chancellor.

STILL 250 IN HOSPITALS AFTER EXPLOSION OF PHOSGENE GAS

HAMBURG, GERMANY, May 22—Comparative tranquillity had settled down over Hamburg today after the involuntary poison gas attack which gave a taste of possible future warfare when fleets of military planes may spread deadly gas waves over enemy cities.

There are 250 persons in hospitals in addition to the eleven who were killed by the explosion of a phosgene gas tank. The death list may eventually reach nearly a score as some of the victims are in a perilous condition.

The gas scourge, which drove thousands from their homes, spread from the Stolzenberg Chemical Works on the outskirts of the suburb of Vedel, until dissipated by ammonia sprays and a rain storm. If it had taken place in the city proper it might have caused hundreds of deaths.

The scene was a replica of wartime with soldiers, firemen and police, their faces grotesque in gas masks, waging warfare against the deathly fumes all over the city, while the population fled in mad panic. Cattle dropped in the fields, trees and shrubbery withered before the yellow death wave.

It is reported that the League of Nations may send a representative here to investigate if the phosgene gas was being manufactured in violation of treaty regulations.

INDICT BANDIT FOR TOLEDO ROBBERY

TOLEDO, O., May 22.—George McDonald, 29, alias Westaway, whose daring attempt to hold up the Ohio Savings Bank and Trust Co., was frustrated by a neatly tossed brick thrown from the hand of a spectator, was under indictment for robbery here today in connection with the attempted holdup. The grand jury, to which McDonald was bound over last Wednesday by Judge Homer Ramey, returned the indictment against the would-be bandit late yesterday.

McDonald had obtained $3,000 loot when he pushed a note threatening the cashier's life through the cage window and had dashed into the street, attempting to commandeer an automobile to aid his getaway when a witness to the holdup hurled a brick, rendering the holdup man unconscious. The money was recovered.

FIGHT COMMUNISM

BOGOTA, Colombia, May 22.—The government is launching drastic restrictive measures to curb the spread of Bolshevism in this country.

POST REWARD FOR ALLEGED FIREBUG

BUCYRUS, O., May 22.—The Crawford County Farmer Mutual Insurance Company which has paid the property loss on the six barn fires in this vicinity recently, today posted a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons that fired two of the barns when a combined property loss of about $15,000 resulted.

Dale Lutz, 38, prominent farmer here, is already under arrest charged with the burning of two of the barns. He is being held in jail here in lieu of $10,000 bond, fixed when he pleaded guilty to the firing of two of the barns.

Columbus Priest To Succeed Bishop As Chaplain

MARION, O., May 22. — With election of officers completed and the choosing of Toledo as the site for the 1929 convention, the annual state convention of Ohio Council, Knights of Columbus, stood adjourned today. Toledo won the convention from Akron and Mansfield, chief contenders for the honor. A grand ball here last night signalized the closing of the 1928 sessions.

Election results were as follows: William E. Haas, Delaware, state deputy; Edward T. Gorman, Cincinnati, state secretary; Edward T. McCue, Middletown, treasurer; E. P. Fitzgerald, East Liverpool, warden; and Grattan Dugan, Wellsville, advocate. Each of these officers was re-elected.

Rev. Thomas A. Nolan, Columbus, was elected state chaplain, succeeding Bishop T. C. O'Reilly, of Scranton, Pa.

State delegates who will attend the supreme council convention in Cleveland in August were named as follows:

SIGNPOSTS FOR PLANES USED

PARIS, May 22.—Illuminated signposts for "aerial streets" are now in operation throughout France for night flyers. They are electrically lighted glass tubes built in the shape of dots and dashes, arranged in the Morse code spelling of the names of towns along the four commercial airplane routes—Paris-London; Paris-Brussels; Paris-Marseilles and Toulouse-Perpignan.

The Morse telegraphic code was employed to save space and insure visibility, as many of the towns have long names and must be further identified by adding the name of the province in which they are located. Although installed primarily to guide passenger and mail traffic, the signs will be lighted up for any flyer on twenty-four hours notice. The use of the signs requires a night flying airman to learn the Morse code.

Aviators are being trained also in night flying by a Parisian school which utilizes a set of indicators prefected by Henry Farmap. With these instruments, it is said, a plane can be kept on its course despite fog and darkness.

CAN'T BLUFF HIM

OSSINING, N. Y., May 22. — Robert G. Elliott, state executioner who miraculously escaped with his life when his home was destroyed by two bombs, today had notified Sing Sing prison authorities that he would officiate at the next execution, scheduled for June 21.

RESCUE CREWS TURN ATTENTION TO TASK OF REMOVING DEAD

One Rescued As Gas Threatened Joked With Crew

MATHER, Pa., May 22. — Convinced that no life remains today among the victims of the Mather Colliery explosion still in the mine, rescue crews began the task of locating and removing the bodies of the last of the 197 victims.

One man, Frank Krubick, 55, was found alive in the depths of the mine today — miraculously saved from death when gas fumes and fire swept by his niche in the coal and rock.

Fourteen others escaped shortly after the explosion Saturday, but one was so badly hurt that he died yesterday. Officials feel certain these are the only survivors.

The slow, gruesome task of digging out the bodies buried within the mine has begun. It will take days—maybe a week or more—before they are all recovered.

Sixty-nine bodies had been removed today—fifty-eight identified, and eleven burned and mangled beyond recognition.

Rescue crews, who checked a fire which swept through butt 22, found Frank Krubick deep in the room, seated on a rail. Gas was seeping into the room, and he would have been overcome soon.

"You no come pretty soon," he greeted them, "somebody choke you."

The gas apparently had been sweeping down the entryway, and C. M. Lengel, directing the rescue work, said that he feared the 136 others known to be in the mine already have been overcome.

Krubick walked to the entry-way without assistance, was placed on a stretcher and brought to the surface. Here an attendant touched his lips with coffee.

"Give me all that coffee," Krubick shouted.

"I no have anything eat for three days."

The rescued man was taken to his home near the mine, where physicians took him under their care, and barred the doors.

News of Krubick's rescue spread like wildfire through the little mining village and hope, which had flickered and died late last night when fire was reported sweeping the workings, was revived as hundreds of men, women and children crowded the hillsides leading down to the mine tipple.

Lengel's statement that he feared the 134 others were dead failed to dim their optimism.

Children ran screaming down the roads, and from every miner's hut poured hurrying figures.

Hope has come back to Mather!

Sixty dead have been removed from the wrecked mine, fourteen rescued men are being cared for.

Bruce Deal, the first of the rescue crew to reach Krubick, said the miner leaped to his feet and threw his arms around Deal.

Despite his threats to "choke somebody," the miner, who is about 55 and unmarried, was in good spirits.

Krubick said that a companion, with whom he had been trapped in the room, wandered away and disappeared down the entryway. Rescue teams said the man probably was overcome by gas.

Fire which gained headway last night, was brought under control in the mine today, and the danger of a second explosion passed. Crews pressed forward, in the hope that others may have found pockets of air sufficient to sustain them since Saturday.

MATHER, Pa., May 22.—Community funeral services were to be held in this little mining village today for the sixty victims of the Mather Colliery explosion whose bodies have been recovered from the blast-wrecked mine.

The services were to be held in the village square, with a chorus of voices, and both Catholic and Protestant ceremonials.

Catholic services were to be held first with a visiting priest in charge, while in the afternoon Rev. C. G. Aldrich, pastor of the Christian Church, the only church here, was to preside. Twenty other ministers from nearby villages were to visit the homes of the bereaved.

CRASH KILLS MAIL PILOT

RICHMOND, Va., May 22.— Edward J. (Pat) Morrisey, 33, air mail pilot operating between here and New York, was killed early today when his plane went into a nose dive and crashed near the city airport. He had just taken off for New York and was believed to have lost his bearings in a fog.

He was buried under the wreckage, and the body was mangled. His home is in Idaho.

The Pitcairn Aviation Company of Philadelphia operates the mail service.

PERPETRATOR OF HOAX IS BEFORE MEDICS

LONDON, May 22.—One of the most sensational hoaxes in recent years was recalled today when Dr. Dorothy Logan, otherwise known as Mona McLellan, appeared before the General Medical Board for a discussion of her confession that she falsely claimed to have swum the English Channel. The case created a tremendous sensation last year.

Dr. Logan who was as well known as a swimmer as she was as a physician, announced her intention of swimming the channel from Cape Gris Nez, on the French coast, to England.

She apparently set out from the French coast and some hours later appeared on the English coast, claiming to have made the swim. Her claim was supported by several persons who said they accompanied her by boat.

For a few days Dr. Logan was lionized when doubts began to arise. Her claim was questioned and Dr. Logan confessed. She was summoned to court and fined $500, her defense being that she did not commit the hoax to gain financially but to draw attention to the necessity of rigid control over attempts to establish new athletic records.

MRS. STATLER BOSSES HOTELS

Mrs. Alice Seidler Statler and Frank McKowne.

By CLARK KINNAIRD
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

NEW YORK, May 22—Mrs. Alice Seidler Statler, whose position as chairman of the board of the Statler Hotels corporation makes her the world's greatest hostess, takes no credit for the distinction that is hers, but she has definite ideas about what a woman must do to be successful in business.

First, the woman must know what she wants to do and she must do THAT.

Twelve years ago, while she, then Alice Seidler, a New Yorker, was employed in a publishing house in a position that she did not like, she decided that she would like to know the hotel business. Entertaining persons and making them feel at home seemed to her to offer an interesting career. She left the publishing house when the opportunity was offered to become secretary to the late Ellsworth M. Statler.

Preaches Confidence

Second, she says, a woman must have confidence in her ability; but she must make it easy for persons to teach her the things she needs to know about the business she wants to succeed in. It is, she observes, still a man's world, and women must accept men as their business masters.

Third, women must look for reality, no romance, in business. They must remember, she opines, that the purpose of business is business.

Fourth, despite all these things, the woman in business should remain womanly, not try to be mannish.

"But," she admits modestly, "my own part in the hotels seems to be largely over-rated. The greater part of the executive work falls to Frank McKowne, the president. Both he and I were associated with Mr. Statler long enough in business to absorb the ideas that we shall carry out."

Mrs. Statler, then Alice Seidler, succeeded McKowne, the new president of the hotel organization, as secretary to Statler. She married the hotel magnate about a year before his death. As his secretary she learned everything she could about the business, paying as much attention to minor details as to executive policies, and she came in time to be one of the most valuable members of the organization, Statler officials say.

Devised Hotel Improvements

She is credited with having been responsible for many improvements in hotel service that have been adopted nationally and internationally. Not the least of these was needle, thread and buttons in every room. And full-length mirrors set in doors, so that women guests might view their whole costumes critically. And keyholes above door knobs so that the keyholes above might be easier to find.

The work in which Mrs. Statler is most interested at present, she says, is the refurnishing of several of the hotels. Meanwhile she has an appreciative ear for everyone and anyone who has anything constructive to say about the multiple activities of the $30,000,000 corporation which she heads.

"A woman must never stop learning," she says.

Goodrich Silvertowns

THE PLATE GLASS TEST. Pressing this heavy glass against the tread shows why the triple-grooved Silvertown tread gives extra mileage. See facts below.

By this Discovery . . .

Silvertowns prevent wasteful tread wear on millions of cars!

WHAT you see under the plate glass, happens about 300 times a minute at every point on your tire, when you drive your car.

Like a flash, the tread must flatten as it meets the road, for balloon tires are soft.

So Goodrich Silvertowns are built to flatten without distortion—free from bulky blocks in the center—protected from "piling up" or uneven choppy wear of the tough tread rubber.

As dealers, we know what this means. It means thousands of extra miles of service, if you buy Goodrich Silvertowns.

Goodrich Silvertowns

THE PLATE GLASS TEST. Pressing this heavy glass against the tread shows why the triple-grooved Silvertown tread gives extra mileage. See facts below.

By this Discovery . .

Silvertowns prevent wasteful tread wear on millions of cars!

WHAT you see under the plate glass, happens about 300 times a minute at every point on your tire, when you drive your car.

Like a flash, the tread must flatten as it meets the road, for balloon tires are soft.

So Goodrich Silvertowns are built to flatten without distortion—free from bulky blocks in the center—protected from "piling up" or uneven choppy wear of the tough tread rubber.

As dealers, we know what this means. It means thousands of extra miles of service, if you buy Goodrich Silvertowns.

Come in. Let us tell you all the other features of these famous tires. Our expert service and cheerful courtesy make it an added pleasure for you to trade here.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Hereafter, instead of soda use a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875. —Adv.

HOSPITAL WILL GET ESTATE COURT SAYS IN CONSTRUING WILL

An interpretation has been placed by the court on the will of Oliver P. Hoffman, deceased, in the case of J. C. Marshall, as administrator of the Hoffman estate, against Nora Bookwalter and others in Common Pleas Court.

The administrator, in the petition, sought the courts direction in construing certain parts of the will.

The testator, in one item of the will, declared "I give and bequeath to my wife, Emma J. Hoffman, should she survive me, all the rest and residue of my estate, both real and personal, for and during her natural life only. On her death my executor will at once reduce all property then remaining to money and after payment of all expenses, including the cost of burial of my wife, pay the residue over to trustees of the Miami Valley Hospital at Dayton to be used by them for adding to or maintaining this splendid public charity."

The testator executed the will July 13, 1918, and left no surviving children or descendents of children.

The court decided the will is valid and that the devise to the Dayton hospital is a valid and legal gift to the institution.

The administrator was authorized to pay any property claims that may be presented to him for caring for and attention rendered the wife of the decedent after his death either in the way of nursing bills or expenses necessary for proper support of the wife subsequent to the testator's death, and also any just claims due for medical services for Mrs. Hoffman, should any be presented.

Defendants excepted to the decision of the court.

TRUCK DRIVER NOT HURT BUT VEHICLE UPSETS IN DITCH

Stewart Hopping, Peebles, O., driver for the Peebles Auction and Sales Co., Peebles, O., escaped injury when his truck upset on the Dayton and Xenia Pike at a sharp curve near the residence of Dr. George Anderson at Alpha about 4 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Hopping was driving toward Xenia and unfamiliar with the road, rounded the curve at an excessive rate of speed. The truck, loaded with furniture, became overbalanced and turned over in a ditch.

It was slightly damaged and was later towed in to Gordon Brothers garage, this city. The furniture was not damaged.

O. H. Cornwell, county road patrolman, who investigated the accident, issued a warning Tuesday to motorists against the practice of blocking the highway at the scene of an accident.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Hereafter, instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875. —Adv.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

EVIL DESTROYS ITSELF—The merciful man doeth good to his own soul: but he that is cruel troubleth his own flesh. —Prov. 11:17.

EDUCATION A SURE RISK

In its education foundation the American Bankers' association has an agency that cannot fail to accomplish something worth while. The bankers could not have put their public service dollars to better use.

This foundation will make it possible for 265 fortunate students to attend college during the next school year. Ninety-eight have been offered scholarships and 167 have been promised loans of $250 each. But for the generosity of the nation's bankers most of the 265 students probably would not see it college next year.

Recipients of American Bankers association scholarships and education loans are students in fact as well as in name. They are accepted because they have shown the real "itch for learning" and have in their character that something which assures their benefactors they will take the fullest advantage of the opportunity offered them.

The bankers are making it possible for 265 young people to get an education. The rest is up to the students and the colleges they attend. The bankers are giving both an opportunity to "produce." All the association asks is that the students come out of college equipped to become useful to themselves and society.

No greater tribute can be paid to the college man than that hardly without exception he quickly repays money borrowed for an education. That fact is proof that he values his education and has acquired some strength of character through it.

WORTHWHILE READING

One question in which all newspapermen are interested, and in which everyone should be, is as to how far people want what is called good reading, informative stuff appealing to intelligent people. Some folks claim that the majority of people nowadays are interested only in light trash.

Ray Long, editor in chief of the International Magazine company, remarks that serious literature is being much demanded by Americans. Over in England, he says, the really important books have only a small sale, but over here a fine work on some serious subject will have a big sale.

American readers are interested in people who do things. Any writer who can put his information into story form, showing how people have done things that were considered impossible, will always get readers.

Anything that touches people's personal interests touches them. They might not read a general article on good government, but if you show them that they are paying too much in taxes because the government wastes money, then they become interested.

In time people will learn that to obtain success for their ambitions, they must be well informed. Those who go through life with only a smattering of information, and have made no effort to read good newspapers, magazines and books, and keep informed on what is going on in the world, are too superficial for any considerable success.

There wouldn't be so many worthless stocks sold, if there weren't so many people of worthless judgment.

The Way of the World

MODERATION AGAIN

There were some words written in this column not long ago about moderation. The word moderation is a philosophy in itself. There are people of the inhuman, professional reform type who cannot conceive of man as doing anything which is quite right other than playing a harp on some golden strand beyond the skies. And there are others, equally unintelligent, who conceive that man has the right to do anything just so long as he likes to do it. On one side we have extreme professional reformation and on the other we have anarchy or complete lawlessness. Both extremes, of course, are altogether bad.

If men could only be taught the value of moderation and then had the brains to practice moderation Heaven would be here.

NOT ALWAYS ALONE

Says Ovid, Latin poet: "Whilst you are prosperous you can number many friends, but when the storm comes you are left alone."

That seems to be the verdict of the world. But it is too sweeping a verdict. Every man who has the character to deserve it, has at least a few friends who are uninfluenced by the state of his pocketbook. There are at least a few friends whose loyalty cannot be bought or sold.

Who has written more understandingly about friendship than Shakespeare. We read in Hamlet:

"Those friends thou has and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatched, unfledged comrade."

FIGURES

You can apparently prove anything with figures—and then find there are things stronger and more true than figures. One can show that at the rate at which population is increasing in this world the world will one day be so over-crowded nobody can live in it. But it never happens and never will happen. By and by the birthrate grows less, and population becomes stationary at the point at which people can live in reasonable fashion.

Millions have come into this country in the last half century, but it is interesting to note that the size of families has been decreasing slowly and regularly since 1850.

The Diary of a New Yorker

by CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK, May 22.— Who is the great leader of New York society now? This query comes in from a number of readers, indicating that there is considerable interest in the subject in the hinterland.

The answer is that there is no great leader acknowledged as such. New York society no longer is one exclusive body, but a number of groups. The "400" has become the "4000." Instead of one leader, New York society which means American society has a number of great ladies, such as the dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mrs. Marshall Fields, Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Francis S. E. Drury, Mrs. Frank G. Griswold, Mrs. James A. Burden, Mrs W. Goadby Loew, Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt (who was Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II), Mrs. August Belmont There are of course, Gould, Drexel and other dowagers to be considered.

Inquiries from readers indicate that lots of persons would like to take that $65 motor bus trip from New York to Los Angeles. I have received inquiries on the subject from Authur K. Rupp, Shiremanstown, Pa., M. L. Cogan Charleston, W. Va., Mrs. E. C. R. Columbus O., J. W. Smith, Augusta, Me., and others.

The buses operate on a regular schedule, leaving New York daily at 10 a. m. The fare to Chicago is $21. Stops are made at convenient terminal points for rest and sight seeing. Complete information is available from either the Hotel Astor bus terminal or Waldorf-Astoria bus terminal, in New York.

Every time there is a parade, or the U. S. S. Los Angeles flies over the city, or some similar event takes place, employers lose thousands of dollars because of idle workers. As I write, a navy dirigible, the J-7, is moving over the city, and I can see thousands of heads hanging out of skyscraper windows. The show will last for half an hour, the boys and girls will talk about it for another hour, and a half day's work will be lost.

The fifth Avenue Association tries to limit the number of triumphal processions along that thoroughfare. A welcoming parade means the disruption of a day's business. Most of the persons who usurp the pavements along the street to gape at notables aren't of the class who patronize Fifth avenue shops.

Seeing a transalantic liner off is a popular midnight diversion. Whenever the Majestic or Aquitania go down to sea at the late hour, there is a lin of limousines down at the piers, with millionaires, stevedores and warf rats sharing the sight of a starry skyscraper floating down the Hudson.

Kellygrams

How to Make Men Honest

Surety companies are making men more honest, first by insisting on restrictions which will make dishonesty difficult and also by impressing employes with the futility of trying to escape punishment for wrongdoing. An individual may forgive an erring employe, but the system of the surety company includes tracking him relentlessly, around the world if need be, until he is brought to justice.

In the old days, when a man entering a place of responsibility required bond, he went to a friend and persuaded him to sign it. Nobody likes to sign such a bond; but it is embarrassing to tell an old friend that you fear he may some day take a sudden notion to steal. Yet a year or so later the obliging bondsman may face the necessity of making good a defalcation. And nothing is much more annoying than to glance up from one's breakfast food at the morning paper to learn that a man whose bond you have signed has gone wrong.

Surety companies now relieve individuals of embarrassing bond signing and protect employers against loss through dishonesty of employes in much the same manner that insurance companies guarantee persons against loss by fire.

Obviously, the surety companies must make their work profitible to themselves. They must take in more money in premiums than they pay out in losses. In other words, they must be able to tell in advance that the majority of persons under their bonds will remain honest. And how is that to be done? How is one to tell an honest man? What are the advance clues to possible dishonesty? If every employer and every person dealing with human beings knew these things it might be a great help.

Certain conditions have such a strong tendency to make for a record of honesty that a surety company is willing to go just by what they can read about a man on the little dotted lines on the application blank. They rarely see the man for whom they provide a bond. They do not know what he looks like. If his record on paper is all right they take a chance on him.

In tomorrow's article I shall try to tell what some of the symptoms of honesty are likely to be.

Tiny patients of the Sunshine Home for Blind Babies in London have organized their own jazz band.

IT'S THE "BERRIES"!

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The Mannerisms and Habits That Add or Detract From Beauty

Mannerisms arise almost invariably from complexes. Some of them are directly traceable to a feeling of inferiority. Under this classification come the personal mannerisms of twitching nose, mouth and eye muscles, tapping fingers, cracking knuckles, a harrowing habit to a nervously attuned person, and many others of the same ilk.

Under a so-called superiority complex, we have what is commonly termed "ritzing," that very foolish pretense that you are something you never could be, for if it were within the range of your possibilities you would be too busy becoming it to have the time to pretend.

Absent mindedness is another very bad habit. One that can be corrected once you make up your mind to do it. People become wed to their habits, you know. They lose things and drop them and bemoan their inability to correct the fault, but they never reach the state of mind where they become ashamed of it. If they did you'd find those same faults corrected very speedily. Mannerisms, and manners, there is certainly a difference, and still they are very much alike. Good manners augur pretty mannerisms.

It is nothing more than good manners to rise when an older person comes into the room, to offer her your seat in a car, to do, in a word, the simple, gracious courteous thing. A "good morning" to your co-workers or your mother, is little else but a human courtesy, and yet that, too, is a mannerism many of us forget.

Jostling and pushing in street cars or crowded places, is in unspeakably bad taste, nor is it a mannerism that adds a thing to your beauty, you may be sure. Completing your toilette in public is a hideous thing to do. Powdering, rougeing, and hair combing are all actions which should be completed in the privacy of your own boudoir, or at least away from the public eye.

I can think of nothing more objectionable than to have anyone comb her bobbed hair in my presence. Aside from the rudeness of it, and it is unpardonably rude, it is most unsanitary and presupposses a lack of personal daintiness which is anything but pleasant to think about.

Another unpleasant manner ism is yawning with your mouth uncovered. Still another has to do with a subject I have already covered, loud talking and laughing. Then we have that odious habit of making personal remarks which I admit is rather more than a mannerism. Not a single one of these habits is difficult to correct. And not one can fail to spoil your loveliness.

To me a girl who fails to offer the small courtesies to her elders and associates could never be beautiful. Often a woman will cultivate some little grace which adds a thousand-fold to her charm. Perhaps no more than a poise of her head, a folding of the hands, not studied, not artificial, for that would defeat its own purpose, but natural, graceful, undeniably pretty. These are the little tricks of beauty. Mannerisms you can learn, cultivate and develop, and I am sure that you will when you once begin to correctly estimate their value.

Suggestions Wash the House Plants

"Many women do not realize that their indoor plants need baths if they are to thrive," declares Professor O. A. Johnson, of the Entomology Department of Cornell university.

"One of the best home treatments for plants, not only because it is cheap and accessible, but also because it is effective, is soap solution, which can be made at home in five minutes.

This solution is made by shaving a quarter of a pound of soap or putting a quarter of a pound of soap chips into a gallon of boiling water. Allow it to simmer slowly until the soap is dissolved, then remove it to cool. This will keep for a long time, and can be used at regular intervals. A whisk broom will serve as a sprayer. Dip it into the solution and give the plants a good bath, shaking the soapy water under and over the leaves.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

Answers to Mothers

God could not be every where; therefore He made mothers. . . . .
—Jewish Proverb.

A Ferocious Babe

"Will you please tell me why my baby, 20 months old, tries to eat wood all of the time? Every time I turn my head, he is gnawing on something. The edges of the doors have great holes where he has eaten into them and he even took a bite out of the edge of the piano. I can't let him out of my sight. Great splinters pass through him and I'm worried all of the time. Some one said his diet was at fault; and some else said it was only a habit. I would be one happy mother if some one would help me about it. Mrs. G."

My word! You're baby's teeth and jaws must be well developed Mrs. G.

You've heard of the editor who, in giving instructions to a cub reporter, told him that if a dog bites a man that's not news but if a man bites a dog, that is news! It certainly is news to me to know of a baby who bites a piano.

The perversion of appetite which causes children and adults to eat chalk, clay, dirt, pencils, doors and pianos, etc., is known as pica. Pica is not unusual among animals. Feather and egg eating by birds and poultry and wool eating by sheep are well known animal picas. Infantophagia is a pica of animals and it means the eating of its own young. African cattle some times develop a pica known as osteophagia (osteo: bone; phagia to eat). They will eat dried wood, stones, old bones and even gnaw each other's horns. It was shown by Dr. Green and his associates at a veternarians' research clinic in South Africa that the animals never practiced osteophagia when the pastures were good. It was found that the disease was due to a mineral deficiency, and was curable by feeding the animals some phosphorus compound or bran or bone meal.

Now there is no doubt that many cases of pica in humans is traceable to deficient diet, just the same as they are in animals, although occasionally pica in children will be due to habit and imitation of other children.

How about your baby's diet, Mrs. G.? Has he a diet that contains all of the things that a child should have—a quart of milk, and the whole grain breads and cereals, and some high protein foods such as eggs, meat or fish, and goodly amounts of vegetables and fruit?

We have a list of modern books on the general care and feeding of children which you should have. (The rules of the column are to send two cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling, and a self addressed, stampd envelope for articles except the reducing and gaining pamplet, for which ten cents in coin, in addition to self-addressed, stamped envelope, are required).

For immediate relief, to break him of the habit, put pasteboard cuffs on his elbows, so he cannot get his hands to his mouth, and then strap his lips together with adhesive. You might even put a little muzzle on him, such as is used by baseball players, if he doesn't stop it! This swollowing of splinters may be serious, so you must stop it some way By the way, a muzzle on a baby when he begins to creep around, isn't a bad idea.

Mrs. E.—Our list of books recommended to mothers and guardians contain the names of several good ones on Sex Hygiene Read directions to Mrs. G., above..

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column, in turn. Requests for articles must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope and two cents in coin for each article to cover cost of printing and handling. For the pamphlet on reducing and gaining, ten cents in coin with fully s a s e must be enclosed. Address Dr Peters in care of this paper.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, May 22. — King George and Queen Mary played a mean trick on Alanson B. Houghton, our ambassador in London, when they tacked five extra "courts" onto their regular schedule for this season.

Choosing the mere corporal's guard of American women who are all he's allowed to nominate for "Presentation" at these functions, out of the large army of candidates for the honor, is the awfulest job the United States diplomatic representative at the British capital has to handle.

Just as he thought he had finished with it for the current year, here Houghton's stuck for an overflow series of the cussed affairs, lasting up to and including June 13—the longest-drawn-out period of such agony on record.

The state department knows exactly how the ambassador and all his underlings feel about it, because plenty of its personnel have been attached to the London embassy in various secretarial capacities, and realize what horrors its staff must be undergoing, from past personal experience.

There was some snickering in the department when news first arrived of the unusual prolongation of the "season," but the older and higherup officials soon hushed it. It was a moment for deep sympathy, they said—not for heartless laughter.

Besides, the slightest mistake on the ambassador's part in denying a "presentation" to some woman who really ought to have been "presented" always is liable to be followed by an unpleasant political "repercussion" here at home —and that isn't a bit funny. Cases are on record where it's affected promotions, or raised difficulties in the way of senate confirmations of appointments.

There isn't a hard-and-fast limit on the number of his countrywomen an ambassador may ask to have "presented" to their Britannic majesties. It would be almost better if there were. Then he could put it on a first-come-first-served basis. But he can't expect to average more than about a dozen per "court"—and he always has hundreds of applicants.

Those who positively must be "presented" usually pretty well exhaust his quota.

Yet the other seldom are from walks in life which make it safe for him to turn up his nose at 'em. They generally have men folks with millions and lots of influence. Their wives and daughters turned down, they raise Cain —cable to their senators, let alone their congressmen — roar to the secretary of state—sometimes invoke the president—threaten — kick up the very devil.

Then again, Queen Mary, especially, is mighty particular.

For instance, the ambassador who stood sponsor for a divorcee at one of her "courts" might just as well send his resignation in with her—he'd be persona non grata thenceforward forevermore.

Now there are quite a few American divorcees who think they're some pumpkins and wouldn't like it to have their ambassador tell 'em, "Sorry, ladies, but you stand no show at the court of St. James—with your matrimonial records."

Thus it will be seen that our envoy on the Thames gets a great sufficiency of "courts" without five "extras" wished upon him at the end of the 'season" for good measure.

It's easier work patching up differences of opinion between the Japanese and two kinds of Chinamen at Tsinanfu.

And some folks say that London embassy's a sinecure!

Living and Loving

Will She Wait?

When "the course of true love" does not run smoothly, but hits financial, rocks, should the man in the case hesitate to inform his lady love—if she hasn't felt the bumps—and ask her to wait awhile until he has hammered them down and made all smooth again? I think not. Any girl that is worth having will not only stand by and cheer her hero on, but will do a bit of hammering herself to break up the tiresome lumps and make the way level once more.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am 21 and have been engaged to a girl 19 for one year, but as I have had a little hard luck, looks like I will have to put her off another year at least. If she loves me like she should don't you think she will wait? Or do you think that it is too long to make her wait?
BILLY,"

If she is the girl you want to marry, Billy, she will most certainly wait for you and cheer you on your way. You are both young and it will not matter at all to wait another year, even if it is pretty disappointing. There will be another year of happy courtship for you both, which you will remember all your married lives.

Your letter is ambiguous, "Shorty." I don't think the young man is too old for you as far as years go. In view of your previous experience with him I would be very cautious, however. If you feel you can trust him, and yourself, as you still care, let him make the first move toward renewing the friendship—insist on that. And keep him at a distance. Make him realize that although you yielded to him once he must treat you with the utmost respect from now on. If you cannot maintain this attitude, have nothing to do with him, or you will be sorry.

"One Misunderstood" asks me to print her letter in full, but I haven't the room, as there are so many writing for answers. If the young man you speak of has never asked you for a date he cannot know you very well and you may be mistaken in thinking he things ill of you. I don't see what you can do about it.

I wouldn't worry about your boy friend, "Heartsick," if he sees you every evening and acts as usual. I think you are worrying about nothing.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

The Alarm

Never did there live a more curious boy than Peter.

"And when you crossed the wide sea were you home, Bobolink?" asked he. Bobolink shook his head and Mrs. Bobolink snickered.

"Home! I should think not!" chirped Bobolink. "We had only come to the West Indies! And we spent quite a while on the islands winging our way from one island to another—we had a friend or two on every one. But along about the first of April (and no Bobolink needs a calendar to keep track of the months) we felt a longing for old Georgia and then the Carolina rice fields.

"When May began to build the house for summer to dwell in—draped the trees in apple blossoms, carpeted the fields with green grass and buttercups, nothward we flew to home, sweet home. With us came a gay crowd. What good times we had! What we saw! But for all our vagabonding how glad we are to be here!"

"There, Sonny-Bunny, do you hear that?" demanded Mrs. Gray Rabbit, turning to her son. "Mr. Robert O'Lincoln says he is happy to be home again. Isn't that just what I'm always telling you that no matter how far you may wonder you will be sure to wish yourself back in the rabbit hole again!"

Young Bunny didn't pay much attention to what his mother was saying.

"Well, if Mr. Robert O'Lincoln has flown so far, why doesn't he tell us about the sights he has seen on his journey?" asked that small rabbit, wriggling his pink nose and twitching his tiny ears. "I for one would like to hear about something that happened outside of this tiresome old meadow."

"So should I," declared Peter.

"And I," added Mrs. Gray Rabbit, then gently reproved her son with a low voice. "The idea to speak so of your own home, my dear."

Bobolink was delighted to find every one so interested.

"Why, of course, I'll tell you all that I can remember and when I came to a place where I forget maybe wifie will help me out."

So Bobolink settled himself more comfortably upon his perch and began.

"One of the most interesting things we saw happened one day when wifie and I had wandered away from the pampas grass. We flew farther than we had intended and suddenly found ourselves at the edge of the most beautiful spot in the world. Before us stretched a wide plain upon which grew the greenest grass we had ever seen Here and there bright colored flowers nodded their gay heads and in the sunshine hundreds of birds and butterflies and bees were dancing

"It was so warm there that wife and I wished our feather coat were not so heavy, but as we gazed about us we saw—far in the distance — high mountains and the tops of these mountains were covered with snow.

"We were just about to join the merry crowd when we heard a cry of alarm. Quick as a flash all the birds and the butterflies and the bees disappeared and we were left alone."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

EVIL DESTROYS ITSELF—The merciful man doeth good to his own soul: but he that is cruel troubleth his own flesh. —Prov. 11:17.

EDUCATION A SURE RISK

In its education foundation the American Bankers' association has an agency that cannot fail to accomplish something worth while. The bankers could not have put their public service dollars to better use.

This foundation will make it possible for 265 fortunate students to attend college during the next school year. Ninety-eight have been offered scholarships and 167 have been promised loans of $250 each. But for the generosity of the nation's bankers, most of the 265 students probably would not be in college next year.

Recipients of American Bankers' association scholarships and education loans are students in fact as well as in name. They are accepted because they have shown the real "itch for learning" and have in their character that something which assures their benefactors they will take the fullest advantage of the opportunity offered them.

The bankers are making it possible for 265 young people to get an education. The rest is up to the students and the colleges they attend. The bankers are giving both an opportunity to "produce." All the association asks is that the students come out of college equipped to become useful to themselves and society.

No greater tribute can be paid to the college man than that hardly without exception he quickly repays money borrowed for an education. That fact is proof that he values his education and has acquired some strength of character through it.

WORTHWHILE READING

One question in which all newspapermen are interested, and in which everyone should be, is as to how far people want what is called good reading, informative stuff appealing to intelligent people. Some folks claim that the majority of people nowadays are interested only in light trash.

Ray Long, editor in chief of the International Magazine company, remarks that serious literature is being much demanded by Americans. Over in England, he says, the really important books have only a small sale, but over here a fine work on some serious subject will have a big sale.

American readers are interested in people who do things. Any writer who can put his information into story form, showing how people have done things that were considered impossible, will always get readers.

Anything that touches people's personal interests touches them. They might not read a general article on good government, but if you show them that they are paying too much in taxes because the government wastes money, then they become interested.

In time people will learn that to obtain success for their ambitions, they must be well informed. Those who go through life with only a smattering of information, and have made no effort to read good newspapers, magazines and books, and keep informed on what is going on in the world, are too superficial for any considerable success.

There wouldn't be so many worthless stocks sold, if there weren't so many people of worthless judgment.

The Way of the World

MODERATION AGAIN

There were some words written in this column not long ago about moderation. The word moderation is a philosophy in itself. There are people of the inhuman, professional reform type who cannot conceive of man as doing anything which is quite right other than playing a harp on some golden strand beyond the skies. And there are others, equally unintelligent, who conceive that man has the right to do anything just so long as he likes to do it. On one side we have extreme professional reformation and on the other we have anarchy or complete lawlessness. Both extremes, of course, are altogether bad.

If men could only be taught the value of moderation and then had the brains to practice moderation Heaven would be here.

NOT ALWAYS ALONE

Says Ovid, Latin poet: "Whilst you are prosperous you can number many friends, but when the storm comes you are left alone."

That seems to be the verdict of the world. But it is too sweeping a verdict. Every man who has the character to deserve it, has at least a few friends who are uninfluenced by the state of his pocketbook. There are at least a few friends whose loyalty cannot be bought or sold.

Who has written more understandingly about friendship than Shakespeare. We read in Hamlet:

"Those friends thou has and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment

FIGURES

You can apparently prove anything with figures—and then find there are things stronger and more true than figures. One can show that at the rate at which population is increasing in this world the world will one day be so over-crowded nobody can live in it. But it never happens and never will happen. By and by the birthrate grows less, and population becomes stationary at the point at which people can live in reasonable fashion.

Millions have come into this country in the last half century, but it is interesting to note that the size of families has been decreasing slowly and regularly since 1850.

The Diary of a New Yorker

by CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK, May 22.— Who is the great leader of New York society now? This query comes in from a number of readers, indicating that there is considerable interest in the subject in the hinterland.

The answer is that there is no great leader acknowledged as such. New York society no longer is one exclusive body, but a number of groups. The "400" has become the "4000." Instead of one leader, New York society which means American society has a number of great ladies, such as the dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mrs. Marshall Fields, Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Francis S. E. Drury, Mrs. Frank G. Griswold, Mrs. James A. Burden, Mrs W. Goadby Loew, Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt (who was Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II), Mrs. August Belmont There are of course, Gould, Drexel and other dowagers to be considered.

Inquiries from readers indicate that lots of persons would like to take that $65 motor bus trip from New York to Los Angeles. I have received inquiries on the subject from Authur K. Rupp, Shiremanstown, Pa., M. L. Cogan Charleston, W. Va., Mrs. E. C. R. Columbus O., J. W. Smith, Augusta, Me., and others.

The buses operate on a regular schedule, leaving New York daily at 10 a. m. The fare to Chicago is $21. Stops are made at convenient terminal points for rest and sight seeing. Complete information is available from either the Hotel Astor bus terminal or Waldorf-Astoria bus terminal, in New York.

Every time there is a parade, or the U. S. S. Los Angeles flies over the city, or some similar event takes place, employers lose thousands of dollars because of idle workers. As I write, a navy dirigible, the J-7, is moving over the city, and I can see thousands of heads hanging out of skyscraper windows. The show will last for half an hour, the boys and girls will talk about it for another hour, and a half day's work will be lost.

The Fifth Avenue Association tries to limit the number of triumphal processions along that thoroughfare. A welcoming parade means the disruption of a day's business. Most of the persons who usurp the pavements along the street to gape at notables aren't of the class who patronize Fifth avenue shops.

Seeing a transatlantic liner off is a popular midnight diversion. Whenever the Majestic or Aquitania go down to sea at the late hour, there is a lin of limousines down at the piers, with millionaires, stevedores and warf rats sharing the sight of a starry skyscraper floating down the Hudson.

How to Make Men Honest

Surety companies are making men more honest, first by insisting on restrictions which will make dishonesty difficult and also by impressing employes with the futility of trying to escape punishment for wrongdoing. An individual may forgive an erring employe, but the system of the surety company includes tracking him relentlessly, around the world if need be, until he is brought to justice.

In the old days, when a man entering a place of responsibility required bond, he went to a friend and persuaded him to sign it. Nobody likes to sign such a bond; but it is embarrassing to tell an old friend that you fear he may some day take a sudden notion to steal. Yet a year or so later the obliging bondsman may face the necessity of making good a defalcation. And nothing is much more annoying than to glance up from one's breakfast food at the morning paper to learn that a man whose bond you have signed has gone wrong.

Surety companies now relieve individuals of embarrassing bond signing and protect employers against loss through dishonesty of employes in much the same manner that insurance companies guarantee persons against loss by fire.

Obviously, the surety companies must make their work profitible to themselves. They must take in more money in premiums than they pay out in losses. In other words, they must be able to tell in advance that the majority of persons under their bonds will remain honest. And how is that to be done? How is one to tell an honest man? What are the advance clues to possible dishonesty? If every employer and every person dealing with human beings knew these things it might be a great help.

Certain conditions have such a strong tendency to make for a record of honesty that a surety company is willing to go just by what they can read about a man on the little dotted lines on the application blank. They rarely see the man for whom they provide a bond. They do not know what he looks like. If his record on paper is all right they take a chance on him.

In tomorrow's article I shall try to tell what some of the symptoms of honesty are likely to be.

IT'S THE "BERRIES"!

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The Mannerisms and Habits That Add or Detract From Beauty

Mannerisms arise almost invariably from complexes. Some of them are directly traceable to a feeling of inferiority. Under this classification come the personal mannerisms of twitching nose, mouth and eye muscles, tapping fingers, cracking knuckles, a harrowing habit to a nervously attuned person, and many others of the same ilk.

Under a so-called superiority complex, we have what is commonly termed "ritzing," that very foolish pretense that you are something you never could be, for if it were within the range of your possibilities you would be too busy becoming it to have the time to pretend.

Absent mindedness is another very bad habit. One that can be corrected once you make up your mind to do it. People become wed to their habits, you know. They lose things and drop them and bemoan their inability to correct the fault, but they never reach the state of mind where they become ashamed of it. If they did you'd find those same faults corrected very speedily. Mannerisms, and manners, there is certainly a difference, and still they are very much alike. Good manners augur pretty mannerisms.

It is nothing more than good manners to rise when an older person comes into the room, to offer her your seat in a car, to do, in a word, the simple, gracious courteous thing. A "good morning" to your co-workers or your mother, is little else but a human courtesy, and yet that, too, is a mannerism many of us forget.

Jostling and pushing in street cars or crowded places, is in unspeakably bad taste, nor is it a mannerism that adds a thing to your beauty, you may be sure. Completing your toilette in public is a hideous thing to do. Powdering, rougeing, and hair combing are all actions which should be completed in the privacy of your own boudoir, or at least away from the public eye.

I can think of nothing more objectionable than to have anyone comb her bobbed hair in my presence. Aside from the rudeness of it, and it is unpardonably rude, it is most unsanitary and presupposses a lack of personal daintiness which is anything but pleasant to think about.

Another unpleasant manner ism is yawning with your mouth uncovered. Still another has to do with a subject I have already covered, loud talking and laughing. Then we have that odious habit of making personal remarks which I admit is rather more than a mannerism. Not a single one of these habits is difficult to correct. And not one can fail to spoil your loveliness.

To me a girl who fails to offer the small courtesies to her elders and associates could never be beautiful. Often a woman will cultivate some little grace which adds a thousand-fold to her charm. Perhaps no more than a poise of her head, a folding of the hands, not studied, not artificial, for that would defeat its own purpose, but natural, graceful, undeniably pretty. These are the little tricks of beauty. Mannerisms you can learn, cultivate and develop, and I am sure that you will when you once begin to correctly estimate their value.

A Ferocious Babe

"Will you please tell me why my baby, 20 months old, tries to eat wood all of the time? Every time I turn my head, he is gnawing on something. The edges of the doors have great holes where he has eaten into them and he even took a bite out of the edge of the piano. I can't let him out of my sight. Great splinters pass through him, and I'm worried all of the time. Some one said his diet was at fault; and some else said it was only a habit. I would be one happy mother if some one would help me about it. Mrs. G."

My word! You're baby's teeth and jaws must be well developed Mrs. G.

You've heard of the editor who, in giving instructions to a cub reporter, told him that if a dog bites a man that's not news but if a man bites a dog, that is news! It certainly is news to me to know of a baby who bites a piano.

The perversion of appetite which causes children and adults to eat chalk, clay, dirt, pencils, doors and pianos, etc., is known as pica. Pica is not unusual among animals. Feather and egg eating by birds and poultry and wool eating by sheep are well known animal picas. Infantophagia is a pica of animals and it means the eating of its own young. African cattle some times develop a pica known as osteophagia (osteo: bone; phagia to eat). They will eat dried wood, stones, old bones and even gnaw each other's horns. It was shown by Dr. Green and his associates at a veternarians' research clinic in South Africa that the animals never practiced osteophagia when the pastures were good. It was found that the disease was due to a mineral deficiency, and was curable by feeding the animals some phosphorus compound or bran or bone meal.

Now there is no doubt that many cases of pica in humans is traceable to deficient diet, just the same as they are in animals, although occasionally pica in children will be due to habit and imitation of other children.

How about your baby's diet, Mrs. G.? Has he a diet that contains all of the things that a child should have—a quart of milk, and the whole grain breads and cereals, and some high protein foods such as eggs, meat or fish, and goodly amounts of vegetables and fruit?

We have a list of modern books on the general care and feeding of children which you should have. (The rules of the column are to send two cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling, and a self addressed, stampd envelope for articles except the reducing and gaining pamplet, for which ten cents in coin, in addition to self-addressed, stamped envelope, are required).

For immediate relief, to break him of the habit, put pasteboard cuffs on his elbows, so he cannot get his hands to his mouth, and then strap his lips together with adhesive. You might even put a little muzzle on him, such as is used by baseball players, if he doesn't stop it! This swollowing of splinters may be serious, so you must stop it some way By the way, a muzzle on a baby when he begins to creep around, isn't a bad idea.

Mrs. E.—Our list of books recommended to mothers and guardians contain the names of several good ones on Sex Hygiene Read directions to Mrs. G., above..

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column, in turn. Requests for articles must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope and two cents in coin for each article to cover cost of printing and handling. For the pamphlet on reducing and gaining, ten cents in coin with fully s. a. s. e must be enclosed. Address Dr Peters in care of this paper.

Suggestions Wash the House Plants

"Many women do not realize that their indoor plants need baths if they are to thrive," declares Professor O. A. Johnson, of the Entomology Department of Cornell university.

"One of the best home treatments for plants, not only because it is cheap and accessible, but also because it is effective, is soap solution, which can be made at home in five minutes.

This solution is made by shaving a quarter of a pound of soap or putting a quarter of a pound of soap chips into a gallon of boiling water. Allow it to simmer slowly until the soap is dissolved, then remove it to cool. This will keep for a long time, and can be used at regular intervals. A whisk broom will serve as a sprayer. Dip it into the solution and give the plants a good bath, shaking the soapy water under and over the leaves.

"When May began to build the house for summer to dwell in—draped the trees in apple blossoms, carpeted the fields with green grass and buttercups, nothward we flew to home, sweet home. With us came a gay crowd. What good times we had! What we saw! But for all our vagabonding how glad we are to be here!"

"There, Sonny-Bunny, do you hear that?" demanded Mrs. Gray Rabbit, turning to her son. "Mr. Robert O'Lincoln says he is happy to be home again. Isn't that just what I'm always telling you that no matter how far you may wonder you will be sure to wish yourself back in the rabbit hole again!"

Young Bunny didn't pay much attention to what his mother was saying.

"Well, if Mr. Robert O'Lincoln has flown so far, why doesn't he tell us about the sights he has seen on his journey?" asked that small rabbit, wriggling his pink nose and twitching his tiny ears. "I for one would like to hear about something that happened outside of this tiresome old meadow."

"So should I," declared Peter.

"And I," added Mrs. Gray Rabbit, then gently reproved her son with a low voice, "The idea to speak so of your own home, my dear."

Bobolink was delighted to find every one so interested.

"Why, of course, I'll tell you all that I can remember and when I came to a place where I forget maybe wiffie will help me out."

So Bobolink settled himself more comfortably upon his perch and began.

"One of the most interesting things we saw happened one day when wifie and I had wandered away from the pampas grass. We flew farther than we had intended and suddenly found ourselves at the edge of the most beautiful spot in the world. Before us stretched a wide plain upon which grew the greenest grass we had ever seen Here and there bright colored flowers nodded their gay heads and in the sunshine hundreds of birds and butterflies and bees were dancing

BEFORE CONDOR COULD GET AWAY, HE WAS HELD FAST BY THE ROPES

"It was so warm there that wife and I wished our feather coats were not so heavy, but as we gazed about us we saw—far in the distance — high mountains and the tops of these mountains were covered with snow.

"We were just about to join the merry crowd when we heard a cry of alarm. Quick as a flash all the birds and the butterflies and the bees disappeared and we were left alone."

Mandell Defends Title Against Challenger

"BABY FACE" LOSES FIGHT TO CHAMPION IN FIFTEEN ROUNDS

Champion Shows Why In Victory Over McLarnin.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK May 22. — The harp that once thru Tara's Hall played lullaby music to willing and unwilling chins had a slightly sour twang this morning.

Jimmy McLarnin still wore the harp on his back as he stepped out of the ring last night after fifteen rounds with Sammy Mandell, but that was only what he had planned to do, meanwhile, taking a bow to left, right and centre was the multitude blatted in unison. What he hadn't expected to wear was the "mouse" upon his tightly closed left eye or the vin rouge upon his upturned Irish nose, for this wasn't part of the act at all.

Neither was the fact that he saw occasion to take no bows as he went, in truth, he took nothing all evening, unless one wishes to include Mandell's inevitable left to the countenance and his occasional though authoritative right to the lobby or foyer.

As for taking the lightweight title away from Mandell, that prospect became an absurdity from the moment they exchanged their first grimace—for the benefit of the cloak and suit men, 20,000 in round numbers when they started. They were also round at the finish, only this time they were round shouldered with remorse. As a fight, it wasn't such a much.

It also would be achieving absurdity to state at this point, or any other, that Mandell still is the lightweight champion of the world. Everybody knew before the first round was over that, if McLarnin really was the outstanding challenger, Mandell would be champion until they started giving away cigar coupons to the two-nickels-for-a-dime telephone customers.

Of course, it is always popular and always safe to stand gallantly over the man who is down and kick him directly beneath the clavicle. I would like to avoid this onerous task but, after McLarnin's performance, I have no alternative but to deliver my kick with vindictive joy and go my way.

McLarnin probably couldn't have beaten Mandell with a horse whip last night but he didn't have to lose so far off that he failed to carry a single round of the fifteen. James was as game as the Irish in him demanded and he never stopped trying in the face of certain defeat. This was all very laudatory and commendable but it meant nothing. My objection is entered to the manner in which he tried.

Virtually ten rounds behind at the end of the tenth—I called the fifth and sixth even—McLarnin was so poorly advised as to keep winging away to the body, his apparent intention being to wear his man down. This would have been ideal tactics if they were fighting fifty rounds, instead of fifteen. As it was, McLarnin's only chance then was to fling right and left hands at the profile and never stop. Of course, it is none of my business that he never started but I nevertheless reserve the right not to like the performance.

It might be pointed out that McLarnin couldn't reach Mandell's head and I will agree with this contention to the extent of saying that nobody can reach another man's head without trying.

However, the fact of the matter was that McLarnin apparently didn't know enough to beat Mandell the worst night the latter knew. And last night was one of his best. He slipped inside the right punch that leveled Terris and absorbed it innocuously with shoulder and elbow. He whipped his left hand into Jimmy's face without surcease, absolutely the worst thing to be without. And, when he felt the urge, he crossed a right that had James' knees in a drooling condition in more than one of the late rounds.

That was the fight, as it happened to be fought. McLarnin tried but never found the combination, which is not to his discredit. He tried to open it with the wrong key.

RESERVES BATTING AVERAGE REMAINS SAME OVER SUNDAY

Team batting average of the Reserves remained stationary at .257 as the local nine obtained nine hits in winning its fourth straight game Sunday.

ROTARY CONTINUES UNBEATEN BY CARROLL-BINDER VICTORY

The unbeaten Rotary Club softball team won its second straight game in the American League by defeating the Carroll-Binder Co., nine 18 to 10 Monday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field. It marked the second setback for Carroll-Binder.

Carroll-Binder performed well at bat but played a ragged fielding game, contributing a number of unearned runs to the Rotarian total.

Kimber and T. McClelland formed the Rotary battery with Swindler pitching and Randall catching for the losers. Kimber, after a bad start, put on the brakes and held the opposition to four runs in the last seven innings.

The undefeated Lang Chevrolet Co., meets the Hudson-Essex team in another American League game Tuesday night. Hudson-Essex was idle the first week and will be playing its first game.

BAYLIFFS TRAMPED ON BY SPRINGFIELD TRAMPS ON SUNDAY

The Springfield Tramps literally "tramped" over the Bowersville Bayliffs for a 17 to 4 victory Sunday afternoon at Jamestown.

As far as Springfield was concerned, it was a free hitting baseball game. The visitors collected eighteen hits, including five doubles and a fluke home run.

Six Bayliff errors also helped out Springfield's cause.

Lucas, Bowersville pitcher, was way off form and weak in the pinches.

Trace, Tramp hurler, was exceedingly wild, issuing four passes and hitting two batsmen, but was stingy with hits and the Bayliffs obtained only four safe blows.

An unassisted double play by Smith was the game's fielding feature. The third baseman got his hands on a hard drive and doubled up a base runner before he could return to third. Kiser also made a nice running catch in left.

The Tramps spent the afternoon camping under Bowersville's long drives for put outs.

Next Sunday the Bayliffs will play Good Hope at Jamestown. The game is called for 2:30 o'clock.

Score by innings:

Tramps	052 022 123	17 18 1

Ritticisms

BY BILL RITT

Gene Tunney has decided to take a voyage around the world. He believes travel broadens the mind. But it also narrows the bankroll.

* * *

One of the spots Tunney will visit is France. He once fought every day there for $6 a week. But those were wartimes and salaries were not what they are today.

* * *

Tunney may also visit England where his old friend, Bill Shakespeare, lived. Gene's interest in Shakespeare ought to make the Bard of Avon (as Tunney humorously calls him) famous some day.

* * *

It is hardly likely that Gene will visit Russia. Those Soviet fellows are terribly crude. They haven't the slightest idea how important a heavyweight champion is.

* * *

Also scratch China off the list. There's no use going to a country where they already have a couple of dozen million fighters.

* * *

Gene plans his big trip to take place right after his fight with Tom Heeney. Tunney's title might also be taking a trip about that time but in another direction.

REDS MUFF CHANCE TO CAPTURE LEAGUE LEAD; DIVIDE TWO

Boston Stops Long Winning Streak Of Yankees

NEW YORK, May 22.—As the result of the defeat of the New York Yankees by the Boston Red Sox in the first game of a double-header yesterday, the other American League clubs perked up a bit today. The Yanks had taken twelve of their last thirteen starts, including eight successive victories, and their rivals were beginning to fear that the winning streak of the champions was due to go on forever—just like Tennyson's brook and the senate committee investigating campaign expenditures.

After being felled by the Bostonese by an 8 to 4 count, the Yanks retaliated by nipping the Sox, 3 to 2, and snapping Boston's winning streak of seven straight. Meusel's home run, ruined Charley Ruffings' four-hit game.

Home run hitters on all fronts found the range, delivering thirteen circuit smacks. Hack Wilson and Sunny Jim Bottomley got two apiece. Wilson now leads the National League home race with eight circuit clouts, one more than Del Bissonette's total. Bottomley has six.

Harper and Roettger of the Cardinals also hit homers, enabling the Red Birds to nose out the Cubs, 8 to 7. The St. Louis club has hit twenty-four homers, a better record than any big league outfit except the Yankees, who have twenty-eight, and the Athletics, who have twenty-five.

The Reds shaded the Pirates, 4 to 3, but lost a chance to go into first place when they dropped a 6 to 3 decision to the Bucks in the nightcap.

The Athletics advanced to within 3½ games of the Yankees by taking two close ones from Washington, 4 to 3 and 2 to 1. Jack Quinn won his own game in the opener with a hit in the thirteenth inning. This victory was costly for the Mackmen, however, as Tris Speaker and Bing Miller collided in going after a fly and suffered injuries which will keep them out of the game for an indefinite period.

A homer by Dykes and French's double gave the A's the nightcap even though they made only one other hit off Hadley. The Nats dropped into seventh place.

Other clubs were not scheduled.

FIGHTER IS NAMED IN $10,000 SUIT

LORAIN, O., May 22—Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, has been named defendant in a $10,000 damage suit here filed by Walter D. Graber of this city.

Graber charges Risko with assault for an alleged beating administered to him April 24, last.

Risko, reached at his Avon Lake home, claimed a man, whom he supposed was Graber, driving a truck, tried to crowd him into a ditch as he was driving near Avon Lake. "He made a pass at me," Risko said, "and I swung back. I don't know what his name was and I had forgotten all about it. I guess maybe I did hit him on the arm."

GUARDSMAN HURT DURING BALL GAME

Private Ralph E. Gorman, member of Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, who was scheduled to fire in the regimental rifle matches at Camp Ross, Milford, O., this week as a member of the local guard unit's rifle team, returned home after receiving painful injuries while playing baseball at the camp Sunday.

A pitched ball struck him in the face, breaking off three front teeth, knocking two others loose and cutting him about the face. The injuries rendered him unfit to participate in the matches.

Mandell Defends Title Against Challenger

"BABY FACE" LOSES FIGHT TO CHAMPION IN FIFTEEN ROUNDS

Champion Shows Why In Victory Over McLarnin.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK May 22. — The harp that once thru Tara's Hall played lullaby music to willing ind unwilling chins had a slightly sour twang this morning.

Jimmy McLarnin still wore the harp on his back as he stepped out of the ring last night after fifteen rounds with Sammy Mandell, but that was only what he had planned to do, meanwhile, taking a bow to left, right and centre was the multitude blatted in unison. What he hadn't expected to wear was the "mouse" upon his tightly closed left eye or the vin rouge upon his upturned Irish nose, for this wasn't part of the act at all.

Neither was the fact that he saw occasion to take no bows as he went, in truth, he took nothing all evening, unless one wishes to include Mandell's inevitable left to the countenance and his occasional though authoritative right to the lobby or foyer.

As for taking the lightweight title away from Mandell, that prospect became an absurdity from the moment they exchanged their first grimace—for the benefit of the cloak and suit men, 20,000 in round numbers when they started. They were also round at the finish, only this time they were round shouldered with remorse. As a fight, it wasn't such a much.

It also would be achieving absurdity to state at this point, or any other, that Mandell still is the lightweight champion of the world. Everybody knew before the first round was over that, if McLarnin really was the outstanding challenger, Mandell would be champion until they started giving away cigar coupons to the two-nickels-for-a-dime telephone customers.

Of course, it is always popular and always safe to stand gallantly over the man who is down and kick him directly beneath the clavicle. I would like to avoid this onerous task but, after McLarnin's performance, I have no alternative but to deliver my kick with vindictive joy and go my way.

McLarnin probably couldn't have beaten Mandell with a horse whip last night but he didn't have to lose so far off that he failed to carry a single round of the fifteen. James was as game as the Irish in him demanded and he never stopped trying in the face of certain defeat. This was all very laudatory and commendable but it meant nothing. My objection is entered to the manner in which he tried.

Virtually ten rounds behind at the end of the tenth—I called the fifth and sixth even—McLarnin was so poorly advised as to keep winging away to the body, his apparent intention being to wear his man down. This would have been ideal tactics if they were fighting fifty rounds, instead of fifteen. As it was, McLarnin's only chance then was to fling right and left hands at the profile and never stop. Of course, it is none of my business that he never started but I nevertheless reserve the right not to like the performance.

It might be pointed out that McLarnin couldn't reach Mandell's head and I will agree with this contention to the extent of saying that nobody can reach another man's head without trying.

However, the fact of the matter was that McLarnin apparently didn't know enough to beat Mandell the worst night the latter knew. And last night was one of his best. He slipped inside the right punch that leveled Terris and absorbed it innocuously with shoulder and elbow. He whipped his left hand into Jimmy's face without surcease, absolutely the worst thing to be without. And, when he felt the urge, he crossed a right that had James' knees in a drooling condition in more than one of the late rounds.

That was the fight, as it happened to be fought. McLarnin tried but never found the combination, which is not to his discredit. He tried to open it with the wrong key.

RESERVES BATTING AVERAGE REMAINS SAME OVER SUNDAY

Team batting average of the Reserves remained stationary at .257 as the local nine obtained nine hits in winning its fourth straight game Sunday.

ROTARY CONTINUES UNBEATEN BY CARROLL-BINDER VICTORY

The unbeaten Rotary Club softball team won its second straight game in the American League by defeating the Carroll-Binder Co., nine 18 to 10 Monday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field. It marked the second setback for Carroll-Binder.

Carroll-Binder performed well at bat but played a ragged fielding game, contributing a number of unearned runs to the Rotarian total.

Kimber and T. McClelland formed the Rotary battery with Swindler pitching and Randall catching for the losers. Kimber, after a bad start, put on the brakes and held the opposition to four runs in the last seven innings.

The undefeated Lang Chevrolet Co., meets the Hudson-Essex team in another American League game Tuesday night. Hudson-Essex was idle the first week and will be playing its first game.

Rotary lineup: T. McClelland, c; Ervin, 2b; Baldner, 3b; Kimber, p; S. McClellan, lf; McElree, 1b-rf; Cox, ss; Hammerle, cf; Sayre, rf; Stout, 1b.

BAYLIFFS TRAMPED ON BY SPRINGFIELD TRAMPS ON SUNDAY

The Springfield Tramps literally "tramped" over the Bowersville Bayliffs for a 17 to 4 victory Sunday afternoon at Jamestown.

As far as Springfield was concerned, it was a free hitting baseball game. The visitors collected eighteen hits, including five doubles and a fluke home run.

Six Bayliff errors also helped out Springfield's cause.

Lucas, Bowersville pitcher, was way off form and weak in the pinches.

Trace, Tramp hurler, was exceedingly wild, issuing four passes and hitting two batsmen, but was stingy with hits and the Bayliffs obtained only four safe blows.

An unassisted double play by Smith was the game's fielding feature. The third baseman got his hands on a hard drive and doubled up a base runner before he could return to third. Kiser also made a nice running catch in left.

The Tramps spent the afternoon camping under Bowersville's long drives for put outs.

Next Sunday the Bayliffs will play Good Hope at Jamestown. The game is called for 2:30 o'clock.

Score by innings:

Tramps	052	022	123	—17	18	1
Bayliffs	010	020	100	— 4	4	6

Batteries— Bowersville: Lucas and Murrell; Tramps: Trace and Swartz.

Ritticisms

BY BILL RITT

Gene Tunney has decided to take a voyage around the world. He believes travel broadens the mind. But it also narrows the bankroll.

* * *

One of the spots Tunney will visit is France. He once fought every day there for $6 a week. But those were wartimes and salaries were not what they are today.

* * *

Tunney may also visit England where his old friend, Bill Shakespeare, lived. Gene's interest in Shakespeare ought to make the Bard of Avon (as Tunney humorously calls him) famous some day.

* * *

It is hardly likely that Gene will visit Russia. Those Soviet fellows are terribly crude. They haven't the slightest idea how important a heavyweight champion is.

* * *

Also scratch China off the list. There's no use going to a country where they already have a couple of dozen million fighters.

* * *

Gene plans his big trip to take place right after his fight with Tom Heeney. Tunney's title might also be taking a trip about that time but in another direction.

REDS MUFF CHANCE TO CAPTURE LEAGUE LEAD; DIVIDE TWO

Boston Stops Long Winning Streak Of Yankees

NEW YORK, May 22.—As the result of the defeat of the New York Yankees by the Boston Red Sox in the first game of a double-header yesterday, the other American League clubs perked up a bit today. The Yanks had taken twelve of their last thirteen starts, including eight successive victories, and their rivals were beginning to fear that the winning streak of the champions was due to go on forever—just like Tennyson's brook and the senate committee investigating campaign expenditures.

After being felled by the Bostonese by an 8 to 4 count, the Yanks retaliated by nipping the Sox, 3 to 2, and snapping Boston's winning streak of seven straight. Meusel's home run, ruined Charley Ruffings' four-hit game.

Home run hitters on all fronts found the range, delivering thirteen circuit smacks. Hack Wilson and Sunny Jim Bottomley got two apiece. Wilson now leads the National League home race with eight circuit clouts, one more than Del Bissonette's total. Bottomley has six.

Harper and Roettger of the Cardinals also hit homers, enabling the Red Birds to nose out the Cubs, 8 to 7. The St. Louis club has hit twenty-four homers, a better record than any big league outfit except the Yankees, who have twenty-eight, and the Athletics, who have twenty-five.

The Reds shaded the Pirates, 4 to 3, but lost a chance to go into first place when they dropped a 6 to 3 decision to the Bucks in the nightcap.

The Athletics advanced to within 3½ games of the Yankees by taking two close ones from Washington, 4 to 3 and 2 to 1. Jack Quinn won his own game in the opener with a hit in the thirteenth inning. This victory was costly for the Mackmen, however, as Tris Speaker and Bing Miller collided in going after a fly and suffered injuries which will keep them out of the game for an indefinite period.

A homer by Dykes and French's double gave the A's the nightcap even though they made only one other hit off Hadley. The Nats dropped into seventh place.

Other clubs were not scheduled.

FIGHTER IS NAMED IN $10,000 SUIT

LORAIN, O., May 22—Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, has been named defendant in a $10,000 damage suit here filed by Walter D. Graber of this city.

Graber charges Risko with assault for an alleged beating administered to him April 24, last.

Risko, reached at his Avon Lake home, claimed a man, whom he supposed was Graber, driving a truck, tried to crowd him into a ditch as he was driving near Avon Lake. "He made a pass at me," Risko said, "and I swung back. I don't know what his name was and I had forgotten all about it. I guess maybe I did hit him on the arm."

GUARDSMAN HURT DURING BALL GAME

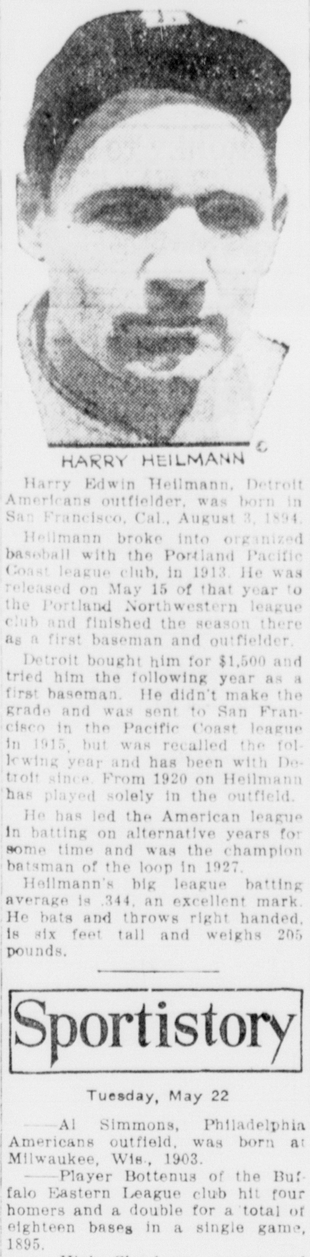

Private Ralph E. Gorman, member of Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, who was scheduled to fire in the regimental rifle matches at Camp Ross, Milford, O., this week as a member of the local guard unit's rifle team, returned home after receiving painful injuries while playing baseball at the camp Sunday.

A pitched ball struck him in the face, breaking off three front teeth, knocking two others loose and cutting him about the face. The injuries rendered him unfit to participate in the matches.

HERE'S CIGAR BABY'S RIVAL

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Gazette

NEW ALBANY, Ind., May 22.—A cigar for the easy chair, a chew for play, and a pipe for the family circle! That's the program followed by Alvin Edward Boes, six-year-old New Albany boy—and he has been using nicotine in these forms for three years.

New Albany folk have been observing Alvin puffing pipes and cigars and chewing tobacco for so long that they can't see anything to kick up a fuss over in the story of a Seattle, Wash., baby who smokes cigars to improve his health.

Smokes For Health

And that's the reason that Alvin uses tobacco. His parents allowed him to smoke in order to overcome a chronic illness and the results apparently have been good.

Alvin declares that he likes a cigar a little better than a pipe but that he hasn't any preference between a pipe and plug chewing tobacco. His parents do not allow him to smoke cigarettes. "But I don't like them, anyway," the boy says. "Cigars and chewing tobacco are much better."

Began With Dad's Pipe

Mrs. Tolbert Boes, Alvin's mother, tells the story of his smoking: "He weighed only two pounds when he was born, and neither his father nor I expected him to live. He was sickly and though we worked with him in various ways nothing seemed to help. Picking up his father's pipe one day Alvin began puffing on it and from that time on seemed better. He has been smoking ever since and has been completely cured of his ailment."

Mrs. Boes says that sometimes her small son smokes only three or four times a day. Other days he is at it constantly. "But we allow him to use his own judgment on how much tobacco his system requires," she adds.

CERAMIC MEN WILL HOLD ANNUAL MEET

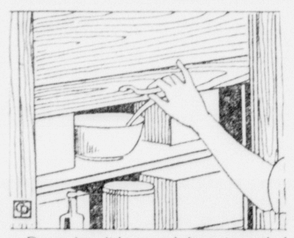

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., May 22.—One hundred ceramic manufacturers and executives are expected to attend the annual meeting of the Ohio Ceramics Industries Association to be held here May 24.

Prof. A. S. Watts, head of the ceramics department at Ohio State University, will give a talk on "A Survey of the Whiteware Industry," in the afternoon.

The speakers for the evening session will include Arthur S. Wells, of the Homer Laughlin China Company, who will speak on "Mechanical Development," J. E. Bundreau, director of art education in the Pittsburgh public schools, whose subject is "Art and Mechanical Production," also Dr. A. V. Bieninger, head of the research department of the Homer Laughlin China Company, who will talk on "Some Physical Facts in Relation to Ceramic Production."

Previous meetings of the association have been held in Columbus but since East Liverpool is the center of the Industry, the association meets here this year.

SWEETHEARTS

By IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

AUTHOR of "MY SON'S SWEETHEARTS," "CONFESSIONS OF A WIFE," ETC.

Copyright, 1928, by Central Press Association, Inc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Lynda Fenton, a sympathetically impulsive girl, is private secretary to Ralph Armitage, who has an insane wife. Lynda's father, a drunkard, tells her that her mother deserted them, and that all women have their price. Sometimes she reflects and believes he's right.

Emily Andrews, who cherishes a secret fondness for David Kenmore, Lynda's companion from childhood, plots against Lynda. David tells Lynda that he loves her, but she decides she doesn't want to be in love with any man. Then Lynda's father, too, deserts her, and Claire Stanhope comes to live with her.

Ralph Armitage is enthralled with Lynda's innocent charms and, although he cannot marry her, he tells her that he loves her. Emily Andrews contrives a scene which causes a break between Lynda and David, who then resigns his job with Armitage.

Lynda innocently leads Ralph to believe she loves him. But it's not love she's thinking of—it's price. Ralph's father tries to break the spell, but unsuccessfullly. Lynda means to do what's right, but now she views the world with what she believes is modern eyes, and frankly tells Ralph's father that, although she's fond of Ralph, it's only his money that would cause her to give herself to him.

(Now Go On With The Story)

What she saw there was a revelation.

CHAPTER LIII
IF DAVID WERE HERE

Lynda went directly to the old full-length mirror that stood at the end of the hall. What she saw there was a revelation. It was only a little over a month since she had gone to work at Armitage & Son's, but in that month she had changed so much that she wondered if her friends did not speak of it.

The girl in the mirror was more beautiful, at that, but was she happier? She was not sure. Oddly enough, her first thought was to tell David all about it. She knew now what he would say, and she determined to sell her house for five thousand dollars.

She glanced at the clock, which was just beginning to strike. It was three o'clock. She could probably find Mr. Anson, her father's lawyer, still in his office. She would tell him to make the sale for her, and—well, she would not think any further.

"This is he talking," was what she heard when she asked for Mr. Anson.

"It is very strange that I have been thinking about you all day, and intended to come over and see you when I went home tonight. Where are you talking from?"

Lynda told him that she was home, and he asked her to stay there for a little while, until he could come over and see her. She hung up the receiver with no little trepidation. She wondered what Mr. Anson had to talk with her about. She wished she had told him she would bring the deed, and called him up again to tell him so, but was told that he already had left the office.

In a very short time Lynda opened the door to Mr. Anson, who seemed a little embarrassed upon seeing her. "Lynda, what have you been doing to yourself? The last time I saw you, you were a little girl looking out on the world with questioning eyes, and now—now," he finished lamely, "you have grown up."

"What did you want to see me about, Mr. Anson?" said Lynda, interrupting his implied compliments.

"Today two men came to my office to ask about a deed to this property."

"I have it, Mr. Anson," Lynda said, her eyes widening with expectation and interest.

"My dear child, the night before your father went away he came to my office and told me that he intended making over this house and lot to you; that he would come in the next day and bring the deed, and I could make it over to you, legally—but he never came. Instead, someone called me up and said that a man who said his name was John Fenton had been found near the railroad station with a drunken jag. He had asked the man who was talking to call me up and say that he had been robbed of a hundred-dollar check and the deed to his house. He wanted to see me immediately. I hurried down to the place where the man said he could be found, but everyone had gone. I never saw him again. I thought the deed and check were lost."

"Of course, you can eventually prove your ownership by inheritance to this place, but first we will have to prove the death of both your parents, and that will take a long time. There are a number of interests looking toward this property, but they cannot oust you from it, neither can you sell it until your legal right to it is proved."

Lynda had not heard much of all this, for pounding against her consciousness was the fact that her father had found that hundred-dollar check when he was hunting a place to put the deed, and probably had cashed it. David had stood the loss rather than hurt her. "Good old David," she said to herself. "There is no one like him."

"I don't think it will hurt to hang onto this property for a while," Mr. Anson was saying. "They tell me you have a splendid job at Armitage & Son, so I infer that you do not need the money.

"Have you heard from your father since he went away, my dear?"

Lynda then told him about the twenty dollars.

"It is clear to me, Lynda," Mr. Anson said, "that your father came back to your house a night or two after I got his call, and he found that check. I would say it was on the second night. He saw that you were asleep, and as you did not wake while he was there, he saw how easy it was for someone else to come in, and that is the reason why he was so insistent upon your renting the place and living somewhere else."

"Do you suppose that Dad got that check cashed, Mr. Anson? If he did, he would have had to write my name upon it. If he did, it would seem as though Davie would have told me about it."

"My dear, that was the last thing that David Kenmore would have done. I have known David even longer than I have you, and I know that whatever he might think of your father, he never would hurt you by telling you that he had proof that he forged your name."

"How dreadful! Sometimes, Mr. Anson, the thing which I think that I always have wanted—that I miss more than anything else in the world—are a real mother and a real father. I envy all those girls whom I know have them, and I never can hate anyone who has been like me—always all alone in the world."

Mr. Anson swore under his breath when he thought of John Fenton, who could treat this girl in the way he had.

"I'll try and find David right away," Lynda said, as she wiped away her tears.

Secretly, she was very glad that she had a good excuse to bring him back to her, and as soon as Mr. Anson went she dressed to go out, determined to go over to David's house to ask him to forgive her for distrusting him.

She thought: "I'll tell him I have just found out that my father cashed that check. It was wonderful for him to say nothing about it. He must have known about it all this time."

Farm Notes

WILL AGAIN SERVE

Livestock cooperative organizations of the state will again serve Ohio livestock men in securing feeder stock this year from producing territory, says an announcement received at the office of the Greene County Farm Bureau. A few orders for feeder stock have already been placed through cooperative channels, although the heavier shipping season for bringing in stock to feed is toward the fall of the year.

Livestock and farm bureau organizations of Ohio were pioneers in the plan of cooperatively purchasing cattle, calves, and lambs for feeding from range territory and western markets. Several years ago the first pooled orders were placed and a number of cars purchased by an Ohio representative on the range. Later arrangements were made to secure feeder stock from both western markets and range country.

Last year approximately 200 cars of feeder livestock were brought to Ohio feedlots by the co-ops. About a fourth of these cattle was brought in directly from range territory of Texas and Colorado through a national pool and the balance came from the St. Paul and Kansas City markets. More than forty car floors of lambs were also brought in for feeding through this channel.

Ohio does not produce sufficient feeder stock to which the corn crop of the state can be fed, livestock men explain. Uniform stock can be secured by the cooperatives from range and market, to better advantage by group placing of orders than by separate action of individual feeders, they claim.

INJURED YOUTH IS STILL IMPROVING

Condition of Paul Stevens, 14, Fort Mitchell, Ky., the most seriously hurt of three students of the University School Cincinnati, who were injured when their roadster upset on the Springfield and Xenia Pike near Goes Saturday afternoon, was encouraging Tuesday, according to attendants at McClellan Hospital, where the youth is confined.

Such marked improvement is being noted that it is believed the student may be able to leave the hospital within a week. He sustained a brain concussion but an X-ray revealed no skull fracture.

The two other students, receiving lesser injuries, were able to return to their homes with their parents, who came to Xenia upon being notified of the accident.

HERE'S CIGAR BABY'S RIVAL

Alvin Edward Boes, six, with his mother, Mrs. Tolbert Boes, and in his smoking poses.

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Gazette

NEW ALBANY, Ind., May 22.—A cigar for the easy chair, a chew for play, and a pipe for the family circle! That's the program followed by Alvin Edward Boes, six-year-old New Albany boy—and he has been using nicotine in these forms for three years.

New Albany folk have been observing Alvin puffing pipes and cigars and chewing tobacco for so long that they can't see anything to kick up a fuss over in the story of a Seattle, Wash., baby who smokes cigars to improve his health.

Smokes For Health

And that's the reason that Alvin uses tobacco. His parents allowed him to smoke in order to overcome a chronic illness and the results apparently have been good.

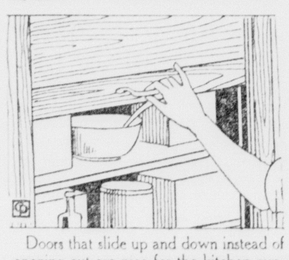

Alvin declares that he likes a cigar a little better than a pipe but that he hasn't any preference between a pipe and plug chewing tobacco. His parents do not allow him to smoke cigarettes. "But I don't like them, anyway," the boy says. "Cigars and chewing tobacco are much better."

Began With Dad's Pipe

Mrs. Tolbert Boes, Alvin's mother, tells the story of his smoking: "He weighed only two pounds when he was born, and neither his father nor I expected him to live. He was sickly and though we worked with him in various ways nothing seemed to help. Picking up his father's pipe one day Alvin began puffing on it and from that time on seemed better. He has been smoking ever since and has been completely cured of his ailment."

Mrs. Boes says that sometimes her small son smokes only three or four times a day. Other days he is at it constantly. "But we allow him to use his own judgment on how much tobacco his system requires," she adds.

SWEETHEARTS

By IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

AUTHOR of "MY SON'S SWEETHEARTS," "CONFESSIONS OF A WIFE," ETC.

Copyright, 1928, by Central Press Association, Inc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Lynda Fenton, a sympathetically impulsive girl, is private secretary to Ralph Armitage, who has an insane wife. Lynda's father, a drunkard, tells her that her mother deserted them, and that all women have their price. Sometimes she reflects and believes he's right.

Emily Andrews, who cherishes a secret fondness for David Kenmore, Lynda's companion from childhood, plots against Lynda. David tells Lynda that he loves her, but she decides she doesn't want to be in love with any man. Then Lynda's father, too, deserts her, and Claire Stanhope comes to live with her.

Ralph Armitage is enthralled with Lynda's innocent charms and, although he cannot marry her, he tells her that he loves her. Emily Andrews contrives a scene which causes a break between Lynda and David, who then resigns his job with Armitage.

Lynda innocently leads Ralph to believe she loves him. But it's not love she's thinking of—it's price. Ralph's father tries to break the spell, but unsuccessfullly. Lynda means to do what's right, but now she views the world with what she believes is modern eyes, and frankly tells Ralph's father that, although she's fond of Ralph, it's only his money that would cause her to give herself to him.

(Now Go On With The Story)

* * *

CHAPTER LIII
IF DAVID WERE HERE

Lynda went directly to the old full-length mirror that stood at the end of the hall. What she saw there was a revelation. It was only a little over a month since she had gone to work at Armitage & Son's, but in that month she had changed so much that she wondered if her friends did not speak of it.

The girl in the mirror was more beautiful, at that, but was she happier? She was not sure. Oddly enough, her first thought was to tell David all about it. She knew now what he would say, and she determined to sell her house for five thousand dollars.

She glanced at the clock, which was just beginning to strike. It was three o'clock. She could probably find Mr. Anson, her father's lawyer, still in his office. She would tell him to make the sale for her, and—well, she would not think any further.

"This is he talking," was what she heard when she asked for Mr. Anson.

"It is very strange that I have been thinking about you all day, and intended to come over and see you when I went home tonight. Where are you talking from?"

Lynda told him that she was home, and he asked her to stay there for a little while, until he could come over and see her. She hung up the receiver with no little trepidation. She wondered what Mr. Anson had to talk with her about. She wished she had told him she would bring the deed, and called him up again to tell him so, but was told that he already had left the office.

In a very short time Lynda opened the door to Mr. Anson, who seemed a little embarrassed upon seeing her. "Lynda, what have you been doing to yourself? The last time I saw you, you were a little girl looking out on the world with questioning eyes, and now—now," he finished lamely, "you have grown up."

"What did you want to see me about, Mr. Anson?" said Lynda, interrupting his implied compliments.

"Today two men came to my office to ask about a deed to this property."

"I have it, Mr. Anson," Lynda said, her eyes widening with expectation and interest.

"My dear child, the night before your father went away he came to my office and told me that he intended making over this house and lot to you; that he would come in the next day and bring the deed, and I could make it over to you, legally—but he never came. Instead, someone called me up and said that a man who said his name was John Fenton had been found near the railroad station with a drunken jag. He had asked the man who was talking to call me up and say that he had been robbed of a hundred-dollar check and the deed to his house. He wanted to see me immediately. I hurried down to the place where the man said he could be found, but everyone had gone. I never saw him again. I thought the deed and check were lost."

"Of course, you can eventually prove your ownership by inheritance to this place, but first we will have to prove the death of both your parents, and that will take a long time. There are a number of interests looking toward this property, but they cannot oust you from it, neither can you sell it until your legal right to it is proved."

Lynda had not heard much of all this, for pounding against her consciousness was the fact that her father had found that hundred-dollar check when he was hunting a place to put the deed, and probably had cashed it. David had stood the loss rather than hurt her. "Good old David," she said to herself. "There is no one like him."

"I don't think it will hurt to hang onto this property for a while," Mr. Anson was saying. "They tell me you have a splendid job at Armitage & Son, so I infer that you do not need the money.

"Have you heard from your father since he went away, my dear?"

Lynda then told him about the twenty dollars.

"It is clear to me, Lynda," Mr. Anson said, "that your father came back to your house a night or two after I got his call, and he found that check. I would say it was on the second night. He saw that you were asleep, and as you did not wake while he was there, he saw how easy it was for someone else to come in, and that is the reason why he was so insistent upon your renting the place and living somewhere else."

"Do you suppose that Dad got that check cashed, Mr. Anson? If he did, he would have had to write my name upon it. If he did, it would seem as though Davie would have told me about it."

"My dear, that was the last thing that David Kenmore would have done. I have known David even longer than I have you, and I know that whatever he might think of your father, he never would hurt you by telling you that he had proof that he forged your name."

"How dreadful! Sometimes, Mr. Anson, the thing which I think that I always have wanted—that I miss more than anything else in the world—are a real mother and a real father. I envy all those girls whom I know have them, and I never can hate anyone who has been like me—always all alone in the world."

Mr. Anson swore under his breath when he thought of John Fenton, who could treat this girl in the way he had.

"I'll try and find David right away," Lynda said, as she wiped away her tears.

Secretly, she was very glad that she had a good excuse to bring him back to her, and as soon as Mr. Anson went she dressed to go out, determined to go over to David's house to ask him to forgive her for distrusting him.

She thought: "I'll tell him I have just found out that my father cashed that check. It was wonderful for him to say nothing about it. He must have known about it all this time."

Farm Notes

WILL AGAIN SERVE

Livestock cooperative organizations of the state will again serve Ohio livestock men in securing feeder stock this year from producing territory, says an announcement received at the office of the Greene County Farm Bureau. A few orders for feeder stock have already been placed through cooperative channels, although the heavier shipping season for bringing in stock to feed is toward the fall of the year.

Livestock and farm bureau organizations of Ohio were pioneers in the plan of cooperatively purchasing cattle, calves, and lambs for feeding from range territory and western markets. Several years ago the first pooled orders were placed and a number of cars purchased by an Ohio representative on the range. Later arrangements were made to secure feeder stock from both western markets and range country.

Last year approximately 200 cars of feeder livestock were brought to Ohio feedlots by the co-ops. About a fourth of these cattle was brought in directly from range territory of Texas and Colorado through a national pool and the balance came from the St. Paul and Kansas City markets. More than forty car floors of lambs were also brought in for feeding through this channel.

Ohio does not produce sufficient feeder stock to which the corn crop of the state can be fed, livestock men explain. Uniform stock can be secured by the cooperatives from range and market, to better advantage by group placing of orders than by separate action of individual feeders, they claim.

INJURED YOUTH IS STILL IMPROVING

Condition of Paul Stevens, 14, Fort Mitchell, Ky., the most seriously hurt of three students of the University School Cincinnati, who were injured when their roadster upset on the Springfield and Xenia Pike near Goes Saturday afternoon, was encouraging Tuesday, according to attendants at McClellan Hospital, where the youth is confined.

Such marked improvement is being noted that it is believed the student may be able to leave the hospital within a week. He sustained a brain concussion but an X-ray revealed no skull fracture.

The two other students, receiving lesser injuries, were able to return to their homes with their parents, who came to Xenia upon being notified of the accident.

Another Xenia Lady Says The New Konjola Completely Ended Her Stomach Trouble

The extent to which this new Konjola medicine is helping the people of Xenia has become the talk of the drug and medical trades of this section. Throngs are calling daily to see the Konjola Man at the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia, and hear his personal ex planation of this surprising compound. At the same time, a stream of voluntary reports and indorsements are received from people of this vicinity, describing the remarkable benefits they have derived from the use of this medicine. Yesterday the Konjola Man said:

"This compound has proved vastly more effective in thousands of cases of ill-health than any previously known remedy. In this day of science, a medicine must first cleanse the system of old toxic poisons, and then the same medicine must strengthen and invigorate these same organs to more healthy, normal action. It takes a liquid preparation to do these things. In making Konjola, we selected the juices from twenty-two of the finest medicinal plants and herbs.

One of the latest Xenia residents to make a public indorsement of Konjola is Miss Ocie Lewis, Summit Street, this city.

"I am free of indigestion for the first time in many years," said Miss Ocie Lewis, "and I want to offer my indorsement of Konjola because this medicine completely ended my stomach trouble after everything else failed.

"For a long time I was troubled regularly with indigestion. The pains from this were terrible and finally I thought I had developed a serious ailment. I could not find a thing to eat that acted normally on my stomach. Food always soured and fermented, causing vast amounts of gas to form that bloated me terribly. My stomach often felt as if a ball of fire were in it. My whole system became poisoned and I was very nervous. Even at night I was troubled and it was hard for me to get the proper amount of sleep. It seemed to me that I was always tired and worn-out and that my work was drudgery going day after day suffering so much.

"I had been taking enough medicine to fill a drug store shelf, and the only relief I could get was temporary. Then I heard of Konjola and I decided to give it a trial, but had no idea it would completely end my suffering. I continued the treatment about two weeks and when my trouble didn't return I hardly knew what to make of it. Now I am able to quit taking medicine entirely and once more I want to say that I am out of misery for the first time in years. I don't have a touch of indigestion. The bloating spells do not come and all the other ugly symptoms have disappeared. I actually feel as if I never had a sick day in my life.

"Yes, Konjola has been a real blessing to me and I strongly indorse such a medicine to others."

NEW YORK, May 22.—There is no immediate prospect of the perfection of devices for the transmission of "motion pictures" by radio, and all reports to that effect must be discounted, it is declared unofficially by engineers of the General Electric company, American Telephone and Telegraph company and other concerns engaged in experimenting with radio-picture apparati.

C. Francis Jenkins, Washington inventor, has a device which he believes will be ready for public demonstration within a few months, but this transmits silhouettes, rather than the full-toned motion pictures shown in film theaters. His machine is, in effect, a radio-shadowgraph.

The Jenkins picture-receiving outfit, as described by one who has seen it in a demonstration, has the size and appearance of late-model radio receiving outfits. It is plugged into the loud-speaker jack of a multitube receiver, and the silhouette picture is reflected through a mirror on top of the picture machine cabinet. A magnifying glass enlarges the motion picture scene. The picture is "framed" by means of an adjustable lever.

Inventor Jenkins takes the view that there is a big audience for these pantomimic shadowgraphs. Many experts disagree with him, believing the public would rather wait for a perfected device reflecting every light and shadow in the scenes transmitted. Broadcast shadowgraphs would be a matter of guesswork to those receiving them, they contend.

But Jenkins opines: "They are just as mysterious and just as entertaining, and the public is entitled to enjoy radio-movies while further development is being made. The art is now only in the 'crystal set' stage of development.

"It is rather a surprise to those who see these silhouettes to find them so entertaining, but the explanation is that the story is told in the action, as in theater movie cartoons, and the intermediate light values are, therefore, not nearly so important as one might suppose. Silhouette pictures were the first pictures, and have retained their popularity for two centuries."

Other inventors, notably Baird, the Scotchman, have radiomovie or television devices; and large electrical concerns are experimenting on them, but there appears to be no justification for statements that the devices will be in general use in any near stage of perfection for two or three years. A score of technical problems incidental to the successful transmission of action views by radio are yet to be accomplished. Even the telephoto apparatus, which uses wires, is admitedly far from perfection.

TEST OF A QUEEN

Chicagoans Believe Marie Able To Cope With Balkans—Has Plenty of Tact

Marie, Dowager Queen of Roumania.

By IONE QUINBY
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

CHICAGO, May 22. — Now that Marie, Dowager Queen of Roumania, is once more in the public's eye, Chicago is recalling three distinct impressions of her gift for diplomacy while here eighteen months ago on her trip to America.

As a result many Chicagoans believe she is capable of handling any situation arising in Roumania, where the regency of the boy King Michael, her grandson, is regarded as somewhat shaky.

The first problem which her Majesty had to solve here was one of dress. It occurred the night of her arrival and might have taxed the temperament of a woman much more placid than Queen Marie.

Was Queen Without Robes

Rushed to her hotel at five o'clock in the evening, she began to dress for the official ball, which Chicago's elite had prepared in her honor. Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick expected to be there, as well as other notables. It was only human that the queen should want to look her best.

But, lo and behold, when she called for her ball gown, she was told by her maid that the trunks had not yet arrived. Imagine a woman, much less a queen, going to a ball in a foreign country, unable to appear in her fine robes. It might have flabbergasted the Queen of Sheba, but not Queen Marie.

Shops were closed and the queen being tall and regally built couldn't borrow a gown from anyone's wardrobe. Did she get "fussed" and resort to the time-worn remark, "I haven't a thing to wear"?

She did nothing of the kind.

"Bring me my negligee," she told the maid.

The negligee, tucked away in a traveling bag that came with the queen, proved to be a wrap around affair of brocade and pearls.

Several hours later, exactly one thousand persons, recipients of special invitations to meet the queen, bowed before her Majesty seated on an improvised throne and said "How d'y'do," as Marie diligently pumped their hands. The queen was beautiful and composed, wearing a rose brocaded gown over which the society editors raved next morning.

None knew until weeks later that the gown so regally worn made its first appearance that night outside the queen's boudoir or compartment. A tuck here and a tuck there, under the supervising eye of her Majesty, did the trick.

Saved "Snubbed" Hostess

The second situation had to do with a woman snubbed by other women at a tea given in honor of the queen. The official hostess to the queen for Illinois, appointed by Governor Small, was the woman snubbed. The next day Queen Marie, who "got" the situation almost immediately, directed her chauffeur to drive to the woman's home. It was the only private residence visited by her Majesty in Chicago, and the woman, instead of being pitied was the most envied woman in the city.

It was Gary, at the steel mills, where Queen Marie saved a third situation. The queen, touring the mills in glass observation cars, sensed a coldness in the atmosphere. The mills as one knows are full of working men who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow. Perhaps they don't care for queens who've never had to work. Anyhow during the first half of the tour Marie didn't get a "hand."

Chatted With Workmen

Then the queen put her wits to work. Rising suddenly she commanded the car to stop near a group of workmen. Calling out in her pleasant voice she inquired whether there was a Roumanian present. A man nodded. She asked him to come forward, shook his hand, asked him about his wife and children, how long he had been in this country and if he had any kin left in Roumania. It broke the spell The little group of workmen cheered, and from that time on the party was a complete success.

Chatted With Workmen

Then the queen put her wits to work. Rising suddenly she commanded the car to stop near a group of workmen. Calling out in her pleasant voice she inquired whether there was a Roumanian present. A man nodded. She asked him to come forward, shook his hand, asked him about his wife and children, how long he had been in this country and if he had any kin left in Roumania. It broke the spell The little group of workmen cheered, and from that time on the party was a complete success.

WHEN THE JUDGE SAYS:
"$5,000"
YOU MUST PAY!

Do you like to be told how you are to spend your money? Of course not! You earned it! Whose business is it but yours how you spend it?

BUT—If your automobile is not protected with sufficient Public Liability and Property Damage Insurance, you may at any time, receive very definite instructions as to how you are to spend a very large sum of money.

If you are involved in an accident, and an injured claimant brings suit, the court may tell you that you've got to pay $5,000, $10,000, $15,000 or even more in damages.

If you haven't that much in cash, your property may be sold to satisfy the judgment.
